Notes for VERNA LEE GREGORY:

I have very fond memories of my grandmother while growing up. She lived just a half a block away and always drove me to school. Fortunately, she lived to see her great grandson, David Weston Anderson. I remember as a child, when I would get mad at my parents, I would stand at the edge of our property and yell for my grandmother to "come and get me." As far as I remember, she never came and got me, but let me work things out with my parents.

My grandmother always told my mother that the love of her life was Raymond Streeter. Evidently he was several years younger than she was, but she never forgot him.
