Notes for WILLIAM BRADLEY:

Obituary Indianapolis Sentential April 8, 1901

 William Bradley passes away at his Buchanan St. home.

He was the oldest member of St. Patrick's Church. Supervised construction of the first dam at Broad Ripple. Willaim Bradley, an aged and respected citizen, died at his residence, 609 Buchanon St. at the age of seventy three years. He was born at Waterville, Co. Kerry, Ireland and emigrated to this country when nineteen years old. He had been a citizen of this Marion County for fifty-two years.

At the time of his death he was the oldest parishioner of St. Patrick's Catholic Church. He was a contractor for a long time and built the first dam at Broad Ripple. A large and important section of the Wabash and Erie Canal was constructed under his supervision. For the last twenty-three years he has been connected with the Schmidt Branch of the Indianapolis Brewing Co and had he lived two years more he would have been pensioned for life, as it was the dying request of C. F. Schmidt that Mr Bradley should receive a pension when he had served twenty five years.

Mr. Bradley leaves four sons, one by his first wife, William, better known as "Dick" a successful trainer of athletes, and three by his second wife, George, Richard, and Michael of this city. Mr. Bradley was a man of sterling integrity and steady purpose, and in his long life had accumulated considerable real estate.

The funeral arrangements have not been made.

The last will and testament of William Bradley

Penal Laws*

"In 1695 harsh penal laws were enforced, known as the 'popery code': Catholics were prohibited from buying land, bringing their children up as Catholics, and from entering the forces or the law. Catholics could no longer run for elected office, purchase land, or own property (such as horses) valued at more than 5 pounds. In the early years of the 18th century the ruling Protestants in Ireland passed these laws designed to strip the "backwards" Catholic population of remaining land, positions of influence and civil rights.

By 1778 Irish Catholics would own a meager 5% of Irish land. Furthermore, the Catholic educational system was outlawed and priests who did not conform to the laws could be branded on the face or castrated. As a result, much of Catholic church services and education and record keeping was forced underground, to operate only under extreme secrecy. The religion and culture were kept alive by secret open-air masses and illegal outdoor schools, known as 'hedge' schools. All Irish culture, music and education was banned. By the time of the census of 1841 the Irish were impoverished, landless and leaderless by the eve of the famine.

Professor Lecky a British Protestant and ardent British sympathizer, said in his "History of Ireland in the 18th Century" that the object of the Penal Laws was threefold:

"To deprive Catholics of all civil life; to reduce them to a condition of extreme, brutal ignorance; and, to disassociate them from the soil.:

Lecky said, "He might with absolute justice, substitute Irish for Catholic, "and added a fourth objective: "To expatriate the race." Most scholars agree that the Penal Laws helped set the stage for the injustices that occurred during The Great Famine and fueled the fires of racism that were directed against the Irish by the British. Lecky outlined the Penal Laws as follows:

- The Catholic Church forbidden to keep church registers.
- The Irish Catholic was forbidden the exercise of his religion.
- He was forbidden to receive education.
- He was forbidden to enter a profession.
- He was forbidden to hold public office.
- He was forbidden to engage in trade or commerce.
- He was forbidden to live in a corporate town or within five miles thereof.
- He was forbidden to own a horse of greater value than five pounds.
- He was forbidden to own land.
- He was forbidden to lease land.
- He was forbidden to accept a mortgage on land in security for a loan.
- He was forbidden to vote.
- He was forbidden to keep any arms for his protection.
- He was forbidden to hold a life annuity.
- He was forbidden to buy land from a Protestant.
- He was forbidden to receive a gift of land from a Protestant.
- He was forbidden to inherit land from a Protestant.
- He was forbidden to inherit anything from a Protestant.
- He was forbidden to rent any land that was worth more than 30 shillings a year.
- He was forbidden to reap from his land any profit exceeding a third of the rent.
- He could not be guardian to a child.
- He could not, when dying, leave his infant children under Catholic guardianship.
- He could not attend Catholic worship.
- He was compelled by law to attend Protestant worship.

He could not himself educate his child.
He could not send his child to a Catholic teacher.
He could not employ a Catholic teacher to come to his child.
He could not send his child abroad to receive education.
