He married HATTIE SMITH¹³ April 14, 1917¹⁴, daughter of REUBEN SMITH and LAURA STEPHENS. She was born September 17, 1898 in Greenup Co. KY¹⁵, and died March 24, 1984 in Hospital in Ashland KY¹⁶.

Notes for WALTER CARROLL:

His draft card shows him to be medium height, stout build, grey eyes, and dark hair. Also says knot on left ankle caused from sprain. Served in the U.S. Army from Oct 2, 1917 to June 3, 1919. He was wounded in the left shoulder and back on October 10, 1918. I have copies of his original wound tag and hospital records. I found this report in the book Illinois in the World War An Illustrated History of the Thirty-third Division published by the States Publications Society in 1920. On page 252 is this story.

Throughout the day of the attack and for several days following, the whole forward area occupied by the 131st was subjected to the most intense artillery barrage. The woods and valleys were continually filled with gas. Heavy machine gun and direct artillery fire played on the troops from the exposed right flank, and, owing to the failure of the Twenty-ninth Division to advance its lines, the 131st found it necessary to bend its line back on the right to meet the left of the Twenty-ninth Division, which was still about a mile and a half in the rear of the 131st right flank. As the troops were continually exposed to a terrific hail of shells and to heavy gas, this operation was a difficult one but it was accomplished successfully. A new line of resistance was established on the night of October 12, and on the following night all troops were entrenched in that position, with the 131st line connecting with the Twenty-ninth Division on the right.

Throughout this battle the 131st had faced the most severe artillery fire that it had yet encountered. The line was thinly held and exposed on the right flank. It was difficult to get supplies forward, and every man was worn out by loss of sleep and the grueling fighting in which he had been engaged continuously night and day from the beginning of the Meuse-Argonne drive on September 26. Continued cold and wet weather had added to the discomforts of the men. In spite of it all, however, the troops fought with a dogged determination and held all the ground that they had gained.

There were many individual cases of extraordinary bravery which give some indication of the grit and fighting spirit displayed by the regiment during this operation. There is, for example, the case of a wounded officer of Company B who was saved from certain death by a private of the company after two other men had been killed and one wounded while attempting to rescue him. Company B, after reaching its objective, was on a highly exposed ridge. The wounded officer lay on the crest in an area over which the enemy's machine guns poured a steady and accurate fire. Private Willard Petty was the first to make an attempt to reach the officer. He was killed before he could reach the crest. Private Percy Jones next volunteered to make the attempt and he also lost his life in the effort. Undismayed by the fate of his two comrades, Private Walter Carroll started forward only to fall severely wounded. Then, when it seemed impossible to make the rescue, Private C. D. Economas dashed across the exposed area and by some miracle returned unscathed with the officer.

On page 299 of the same book Walter Carroll is listed as being cited for Gallantry by Major General George Bell, Jr. Commanding Officer of the Thirty-third Division.

I also have his dog tag on which is imprinted, Walter Carroll Private Co. B 131 Inf NG US on one side and 1977867 on the other.
