In 1870 working as a lumberman at Camp 5 of the John S. Owen Lumber Company.

On September 14, 1870, three young men drowned. they were employees of Thomas DEJEAN when he worked for the Owen Lumber Company. They were running the river and were asleep on a raft tied to a huge oak tree that was leaning over the river. It was used regularly by river men for mooring rafts. While the cook was on shore In the morning making breakfast, the tree, which had been undermined by the current, crashed across the raft on the sleeping men. He yelled but only one of the four men awakened and escaped. Two of the bodies were found but the third was discovered eleven days later four miles away. A folk ballad called "The Fatal Oak" was written by Abbie Payne in the fall of 1870 to commemorate the tragedy. Later the ballad was made into a play

There is a debate as to whether it was the Kickapoo or the Wisconsin River.

Anson, Thomas' son, later had it printed
It reads in part:

The Captain [Thomas DEJEAN] strove his grief to hide,
But now he wrung his hands and cried
Saying, 'this is a bitter cup,
My boys, how can I give you up?"

He platted the Town of Genesee Wisconsin and donated the land for the cemetery at LaFarge Wisconsin, there is a statue of him in the cemetery there. In Vernon Co Wisconsin, he had a store, mill, blacksmith shop and later built a school

Notes for ELICK JONES:

It is fitting that we give a fuller account of Ellick Jones, for he was an important person In the early days of the town. He was born In Dover, Windham county, Vermont, In 1800. When less than 10 years old he drove a team. or did more rugged labor, when his father, Solomon Jones emigrated from Vermont to the wilderness of Chautauqua In 1810. His education was In part., that of our early common schools, but largely In the school of active labor, and worldly experience. A stouter, more rugged, useful young man never trod the wilderness of the rapids; he grew up energetic, inured to hardships, and with expectation of battling with them. He was scarcely 20 when he married and moved into the log house at Jones's landing, vacated by his father's moving into the Allen tavern In Jamestown. He was early made captain of militia In the 162nd regiment, and for many years was known as Captain Jones. After the death of his wife he left. the hotel and engaged for a time In the grocery trade, but after the failure of Elder Trumbull * In supplying the village with meat, he went into that business and for many years kept the principal meat market In the village, lie was a very prominent, active, necessary man In Jamestown, far more so than what we write of his pursuits would indicate. He had six children by his first wife who arrived at maturity; five of whom are now living.

Ellick Jones for a second wife married Harriet DEJEAN, by whom he had several children, daughters. He died of cancer of the face In 1866. His wife is still living.
