Notes for BENJAMIN YOUNG SR.:

[Young.GED]

[YoungAncestry.ged]

Benjamin came to Baltimore, MD at an early age, met and married Zipporah Gist in 1751. They came to the fork of Dan River and Town Fork Creek in Anson County, NC (later Rowan, then Surry , then Stokes) and settled. They went back to Baltimore where first child Rebecca was born i n 1752 and then came back to Stokes and got a Granville Land Grant of 699 acres on 8/10/1762 . (See The Granville District of NC 1748-1763, Vol 3, Hoffman, Page 114). The land was on the north side of the Town Fork Creek and Dan River. They were probably the first white residents in what is now Stokes County, NC. They Built a stockade against the Indians on their land and called the place "Old Town". Here he farmed, hunted, and fished. Benjamin listed as Tyndale on Dan River for the year 1751. Also Nathaniel Gist and son Christopher, and Negro Joe. Benjamin exempted from poll tax by the Stokes Co. Court on November 17, 1785. Also on the same day William Southern was exempted.

One of the stories handed down through the years is that nearby Bull Creek got its name from one of his hunting escapades. The story goes that he went up the creek and stalked a large, ferocious buffalo, and attacked him with his flint rifle. The buffalo was wounded and terribly mad and charged him so that he lost his rifle and took to a tree, where the buffalo kept him treed until the next day. Christopher Young, son of Rhoda, was apprenticed to Benjamin 9/8/1796 to learn the art of wagon making. Rhoda was probably a daughter inlaw. Letters of administration of the estate were issued to son Benjamin Young, George Young, and Joseph Winston on 12/14/1809. There are many references to land transfer in Stokes County Deeds, Vol. I and II, 1787-1797 in which Benjamin and his children are mentioned. (Joshua, Samuel, Rebecca Goode, William).

Rhoda is listed as the Mother of Christopher. Christopher was apprenticed to Benjamin Young in 1796. He was too old to be his son, so we assume he was a grandson. Rhoda was either a daughter who never married, or a daughter-in-law whose husband died young.

PROPERTY RELINQUISHMENT Of REBECCA GOODE Dated August 21, 1805

Transcribed 1996 from LDS Microfilm. A note about the name "Lemuel"...Richard Goode had a son named

Samuel; however, on each occasion that I have transcribed the name Lemuel, that is wh at it definitely appeared to be in this document. Although "S's" and "L's" are very often sim ilar and confused in the early handwriting, it was the second letter, which always appeared t o be an "e" (with the loop), that determined the final transcription. The only alteration fro m the original is the capitalization of surnames. Sandra G. Taylor.

A Joshua Young born abt. 1765 married Orpha McKenzie 15 Feb 1783. That would have made him only 18 give or take a year. I found this in Baltimore County, MD. Later on there was a child named Benjamin McKenzie Young.

[Young.GED]

[YoungAncestry.ged]

Article from "History of Allen and Woodson Counties, Kansas" compiled by Wallace Duncan and C has.F. Scott in 1901: The record of George H. Young is that of a conscientious man who by his upright life has won the confidence of all with whom he has come in contact. He has passed the 83rd milestone on life's journey and although the snows of many winters have whitened his hair, he has a vigor of a much younger man and in spirits and interest seems yet in his prime. George H. Young received only such educational privileges as were afforded by the common schools of his native state (NC). He was reared to manhood under the parental roof, and on the 11th day of March, 1840, was united in marriage to Miss Polly A. Ross. He owned a small farm in NC and continued its operation until 1860, when he started for Kansas, hoping to there secure a good location. Because of the drought in Kansas, he purchased a farm in Cass Co., Mo., and there took up his abode. Afterward, however, he moved to Johnson Co., Kansas. He returned to Mo. for six months and then in 1870 came to Allen County and secured a claim comprising a quarter section of land in the southeast part of the county. Not a furrow had been turned or an improvement made, but he at once began its development and has made his home thereon for 30 years. He has survived many trials since coming to the west. During the war he joined the militia and aided in guarding the families on the border. He was called on to perform the arduous task of improving a new farm in Kansas, but now has a valuable property which supplies him with all the necessities and comforts of life. In 1894 Mr. Young was called on to mourn the loss of his wife who died on September 3rd at the age of 72. To them were born 11 children of whom nine reached maturity and in 1894 eight were still living. Mr. Young cast his first presidential ballot for William Henry Harrison and was a stalwart Whig until the organization of the Republican Party when he joined its ranks and has since followed its banner giving his support to President McKinley in 1896 and again in 1900. Everything pertaining to the welfare of the community received his endorsement and co-operation. To the Methodist Episcopal congregation he gave a plot of ground. The church was organized and built in 1883. Mr. Young is a well preserved man, vigorous and energetic with memory unimpaired and mind undimmed with the weight of years.-----The above was an interview with Mr. Young in 1901. He died Feb. 16, 1902. His daughter Anna Young lived in the home place until a fire destroyed the home place and killed Anna. Anna was past 80 years of age.

The Battle of Cemetery Hill Gettysburg Pa July 2nd, 1863

Tarheels and Tigers by Ed Mantell

On the night of July 2, 1863 after one of the fiercest artillery duels of the war, the 21st N C took part in some of the worst fighting seen at Gettysburg. It was reported that Major J.W . Lattimers 16 confederate guns fired 1,147 rounds at the federals entrenched on Cemetery Hil l, over 60

Federal<<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge5.jpg>>guns <cridge5.jpg> returned fire. Hays' Louisiana Tigers anchored the right of the Confederate line on Winebrenner 's Run, with the 6th, 21st, and 57th NC on the left. Formed up in the front yard of the Cul p family farm under the command of Col. Isaac Avery. Around 6:30pm Gen. Ewell gave Hays and Avery the order to advance. The whole Confederate line proceeded to right wheel <cridge3.jpg> into battle. Hay's Tigers slammed into the Federal Line first, torn by double canister. The Tigers proceeded forward over fence and wall advancing as the artillery fire intensified. The 21st in the center of the North Carolina regiments ran into the federals advance pickets , the 41st NY, and the 33rd MA, who after firing a volley or two fell back to the right of the main federal line. The 21st pressed forward crossing two stone walls under heavy fire both cannon and musket, advancing toward the federals. In front lay the 68th and 54th NY regiments, newly formed and not yet tested in battle crouched behind a stone wall on Brickyard Lane . The NC units now only yards away surged forward with a spine tingling rebel yell! Here the fighting intensified as men fought with bayonets and rifle butts. Due to the steepness of the hill the federal batteries could not depress their cannon to support the infantry and longer. Overwhelmed by the gray clad Tarheels, the 68th and 54th NY units broke and ran toward the gatehouse on Cemetery Hill. Seeing this hole open in the Federal line the 21st charged <<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge8.jpg>> up the hill towards Rickett's battery <<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge6.jpg>> of guns. Sometime during this phase of the battle, Col. Avery <<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge7.jpg>> fell, shot in the back of the neck while turning to give orders to his men. His last act on the field was to write a note in his own blood, it read: "Please tell my father I died with my face to the enemy". The 21st now overran Rickett's Battery <<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge1.jpg>> capturing some of its guns. Darkness had now fallen and small battles raged everywhere as small pockets of men engaged each other in close deadly combat, illuminated only by musket and cannon fire. About 9:00pm Federal reinforcements consisting of the 14th ID, 4th OH, and the 7th WV, the "Gibraltar Brigade" arrived. Advancing with fixed bayonets into the battle , forward toward Rickett's Battery and the 21st NC, after brief hand to hand fighting the Confederates were pushed back down the hill in much disorder followed by the 7th WV which halted at stone wall originally held by the NY units. The battle for the most part was now over, with small skirmishes continuing through the night as the Confederates made their way back to the safety of their own lines.

<<http://www.geocities.com/nct21st/gettys/cridge4.jpg>> It is very possible that the 21st North Carolina actually went the furthest at Gettysburg! Three Cheers for the "OLD NORTH STATE"!

Gettysburg Campaign 21st NCT June-July 1863 by Clark Fox

Following the defeat of the Federals at Chancellorsville and the death of Jackson, the Army of Northern Virginia returned to Fredericksburg, where it was reorganized into three corps. Hooker's brigade, under Col. Avery, remained in Early's Division, which was assigned to Lieutenant General Richard S. Ewell's corps. On the march into Pennsylvania, which followed in June and culminated in the battle of Gettysburg, the 1st Battalion NC Sharpshooters was detached from Hokes (Averys) brigade and attached to Ewells headquarters. June 4, 1863- Hokes (Averys) brigade left its camp near Hamiltons Crossing as Earlys division moved with Ewells Corps toward the Shenandoah Valley.

June 13th, 1863- The Division went into position in front of the enemy at Winchester, Va.

June 13-14, 1863- During the fighting at Winchester, Hokes (Averys) brigade was held in reserve behind the front and ordered to support the artillery. The brigade was not actively engaged as a unit in assaulting the enemy positions.

June 14-15, 1863- The Federal forces at Winchester retreated during the night and the brigade occupied Winchester on June 15th. At Winchester the 54th NC Troops was detached from the brigade to escort prisoners back to Staunton.

June 22, 1863- The 21st NC (Hokes Brigade) forded the Potomac River at Shepardstown, Md, and entered Pennsylvania the next day. The Brigade now consisted of the 21st NC, 6th NC, and the 57th NC.

June 24th, 1863- Earlys division moved through Quincy and Altondale to Greenwood, where it remained in camp on June 25th.

June 26th - July 1st, 1863- The 21st NC marched with the division to the outskirts of Harrisburg, Pa. where on July 1st the Division was ordered to countermarch and rendezvous at Gettysburg, Pa. The 21st made this march towards Gettysburg on the Heidlersburg road.

July 1st, 1863- The Division came on the field at Gettysburg as Genl. Rodes division was engaging the enemy, and after forming a line of three brigades (with Hokes / Averys men on the left) and placing his fourth brigade behind, Early ordered his right brigade forward to the aid of Rodes. As soon as the right brigade engaged the enemy, Early ordered his other two front-line brigades forward. Col. A.C. Godwin, 57th NCT who commanded the brigade after Col. Avery was mortally wounded, reported the activities of Hokes / Averys brigade on July 1-3 as follows.....

O.R., S. I. vol. XXVII, pt. 2, pp. 484-485

July 1, 1863 Skirmishers were deployed in front of our lines, and at 3 pm the order to advance was received. The enemy had formed a line of battle on the hillside in front of the town under cover of a strong fence, portions of which were made of stone. Our advance was made with great deliberation until we approached a sluggish stream or slough, about 200 yards in front of the enemy's lines, when the batteries opened upon us with grape and canister, seconded by a very destructive fire from the infantry. Col. Avery now gave the order to double-quick, and the brigade gallantly dashed through the stream and up the hill to the fence, the enemy stubbornly holding their position until we had climbed over into their midst. Two Napoleon guns were taken by the 6th NC. A large number of prisoners taken at this point were sent to the rear. The enemy now fled into the town, many of them being killed in retreat. The brigade continued to advance toward the town, but while yet in the outskirts, was wheeled to the left and reformed on the railroad. The enemy had now succeeded in planting a battery upon a high sloping spur on the mountain side (Cemetery Hill) immediately on our front. Under cover of the railroad cut, we were moved by the left flank about 400 yards to the left, and again moved forward. The shells from the enemy proving very effective, we were soon after halted in a depression on the hillside, and the men ordered to lie down. Skirmishers were thrown forward, and this position held through the night and until 8 pm on the next day, July 2nd, when the brigade moved forward to the attack.

July 2, 1863 Hokes / Averys brigade was ordered to sleep on arms near a railroad cut during the night of July 1-2 and continued to occupy this position throughout the day on Thursday, July 2nd. Having received orders to attack, Genl. Early ordered a cannonade of the Cemetery Hill fortifications. At 6:30 pm Hokes / Averys brigade and Hay's brigade were ordered to the advance. Hoke brigade held the left of the line and therefore had the longer march, covering 400+ yards, most of which under heavy artillery fire from Union batteries that literally swept the field with cannister, grape and shot. Hokes brigade advanced in a battle line with the 6th NC on the right, 21st NC in the center, and 57th NC on the left. Consequently, due to the line of march, the 57th NC took the brunt of the artillery bombardment and were literally cut to ribbons... while receiving cannon fire from the front and being enfiladed by the 5th Maine battery on a knoll to their left. The brigade also had to make a right wheel while under fire and in the process of crossing 2 creeks and rock walls and rail fence.

Col. Godwin reports..... As soon as the summit of the hill was gained, it was discovered that the batteries which we had been ordered to take were in front of Hay's brigade, and considerably to the right of our right flank. We continued to advance, however under a terrific fire, climbed a rail fence and still farther beyond descended into a low bottom, and dislodged a heavy line of infantry from a stone wall running parallel with our front. The enemy's batteries now enfiladed us and a destructive fire was poured into our ranks from a line of infantry formed in rear of a stone wall running at right angle with our line of battle and immediately below the batteries. Col. Avery now ordered a change of front, and succeeded in wheeling the brigade to the right, a movement which none but the steadiest veterans could have executed under such circumstances. In swinging around, three stone walls had to be surmounted. The ground was rocky and uneven, and these obstacles prevented that rapidity of movement and unity of action which might have insured success. The men now charged up the hill with heroic determination and drove the enemy from his last stone wall. In this charge the command had become much separated, and in the darkness it was now found impossible to concentrate more than 40 or 50 men at any point for a farther advance. Major Tate with a portion of the 6th NC aided by a small number of the 9th Louisiana Regt. succeeded in capturing a battery on the right. No supports were at hand, and the approach of the enemy in overwhelming force compelled him to retire. The scattered fragments of the brigade now withdrew, and were reformed near the position which it had occupied through the day.

Here I learned for the first time that our brigade commander Col. Avery had been mortally wounded. In his death the country lost one of her truest and bravest sons, and the army one of its most gallant and efficient officers. In the desperate struggle through which we had just passed, the officer and men of Hokes brigade fulfilled all the expectations which their gallantry on former occasions had excited. No body of men of equal number could have accomplished greater results against such overwhelming odds. During the night fighting on Cemetery Hill, visibility was near zero as the darkness and gun smoke combined to make the men fire at gun flashes only. In several instances hand to hand fighting broke out, and as Col. Godwin reported, fighting devolved into groups of small pockets of men. As the 21st NC withdrew from this position the color bearer was shot down (the 4th) and the colors were left on the field...later to be picked up by a Union soldier. He later claimed that he captured them in a charge on the Confederate lines on July 3rd. Indeed, the 21st NC was not engaged at all on July 3rd. He did nevertheless receive the Congressional Medal of Honor for capturing the 21st NC Regimental Flag. Although this flag was supposed to have been turned into the Fed. Govt., it was not done so, but was taken / delivered to his home... reportedly destroyed in a fire later in the 19th century.

Evening, July 2, 1863

Due to heavy reinforcements of the Federal line, and since no Confederate support from Rodes Division materialized, the small fighting groups of the 21st NC slowly withdrew from the Cemetery Hill fight and found their way back to the railroad cut position of July 1st. All units in the brigade (especially the 57th NC) has suffered tremendous casualties and many brave soldiers in the 21st NC would never see home in the North Carolina Piedmont again. During the attack on Cemetery Hill on July 2, the 21st NC lost 9 killed, 65 wounded, and 37 missing (presumed dead or captured). Although heavily engaged for the past 18 months, the 21st had not experienced this heavy a loss since the first Battle of Winchester in May of 1862. The loss rate of 102 men is estimated to constitute over a 40% loss... A look at the roster of the 21st NC shows the tremendous loss of officers as they lead the troops on the advance and were particular targets of Union marksmen.

Col. Godwin in his official report states..... the command of the brigade now devolved, and before daylight (on July 3rd) by order of Major General Early, I moved into position in the railroad cut on the outskirts of the town. Later in the day I was ordered to form on the left of Hay's brigade, in one of the upper streets of the town, and in advance of the position on the railroad.

Thus, the brigade spent the 3rd day of the battle of Gettysburg in reorganizing from the Cemetery Hill fight. The men were able to get some very badly needed rest...after having marched from Harrisburg and going directly into battle on July 1st, enduring an off and on artillery bombardment all day on the 2nd and finishing up with an evening assault on Cemetery Hill.

July 4th, 1863

Col. Godwin reports... At 2:00 am, on the morning of July 4th by order of Major General Early, I moved the brigade by the right flank to a position west of Gettysburg, and formed line of battle on the left of Hay's brigade. This position was maintained throughout the day. At 2:00 am, on the morning of the 5th, the brigade moved off with the Division in the direction of Hagerstown. Early's division served as the rear guard of the Army of Northern Virginia as it marched back to Virginia.

July 5th, 1863

The Division marched toward Fairfield

July 6th, 1863

The Division moved to the front of Ewells Corps as Rodes Division became the rear-guard of the Army.

July 6th-7th, 1863

The night of July 6th-7th the 21st NC spent the night near Waynesboro.

July 7th, 1863

Very early on July 7th, the 21st NC moved toward Hagerstown, and Early's Division encamped about a mile north of the town on the Chambersburg Road. There it remained until July 10th when it was moved through Hagerstown to a position southwest of town on the Cumberland road. At Hagerstown the 54th NC rejoined the brigade. The division was again moved to the right the next day, remained in position until after dark on July 12th, when it was moved to the right across the Williamsport road to support Genl. A. P. Hill's line. At dark on July 13th the division was withdrawn to Williamsport, and on July 14th it re-crossed the Potomac. Hokes brigade forded the river above Williamsport. A few weeks after the army returned to Virginia, the 1st Battalion NC Sharpshooters rejoined Hokes brigade, which was thereby restored to its full complement of units.

Major Beall's account of the 21st NCT at Gettysburg

We then passed over the Potomac and went to Little York, Pa., 1 July the two armies again encountered each other, at Gettysburg. On this day the regiment assisted in gaining a very decided victory over the enemy, driving him back in great confusion, through Gettysburg. On the second day we made an assault on the enemy's fortified line and failed. In the general history which will go down to posterity, of course nothing more than a brief and cursory reference can or will be made, to the service of any small command. Yet it is due this gallant brigade (then Hoke's) as also to those who lived not to see the clouds and darkness of other days, to refer briefly to the glorious service of as brave a set of men as the sun ever shone upon. I will in my feeble way, attempt to show how those indomitable patriots demeaned themselves amid the wild carnage of that stricken field. The impressions of the writer, of that memorable day are not a picture of mere fancy, but one of actual experience. Methinks I still hear, through the long vista of years, the rolling echo of those awful accents of battle. After a lapse of thirty-seven years, I recall not without emotion, the incidents of the battle which occurred on that second day at Gettysburg, and while life lasts, will cherish my remembrance of the magnificent courage displayed by our command.

THE ASSAULT ON CEMETERY HEIGHTS

After lying all day under a July sun, suffering with intense heat, and continually annoyed by the enemy's sharpshooters from the heights, from sheer desperation, we hailed with delight the order to again meet the veteran foe, regardless of his advantage in numbers and position. Really, the enemy's artillery, reopening at the going down of the sun, fell like music upon our ears. At the time the assault was made, the enemy had massed heavily in our front, and placed batteries in the rear of his own lines, which were used with fearful effect against us, firing over the heads of his own men. The ground we had to pass over was ascending, but the troops advanced in double quick time, and with a cheer went over the rifle pits in advance of the enemy's main line of works, killing and capturing a few of them--the greater part taking refuge behind the main line of breastworks. Here the fighting was desperate, but like an unbroken wave, our maddened column rushed on, facing a continual stream of fire. After charging almost to the enemy's line, we were compelled to fall back, but only a short distance. The column reformed and charged again, but failed to dislodge the enemy. The brigade held its ground with unyielding determination--ever keeping afloat our flag to battle and breeze.

SLAUGHTER OF COLOR BEARERS

Four out of five of the color-bearers who dared hold up that flag, went down to a heroic death. As often as the flag went down it was taken up and flaunted in the face of the enemy, holding an impregnable position. The hour was one of horror. Amid the incessant roar of cannon, the din of musketry, and the glare of bursting shells making the darkness intermittent--adding awfulness to the scene--the hoarse shouts of friend and foe, the piteous cries of wounded and dying, one could well imagine, (if it were proper to say it), that "war is hell". Further effort being useless, we were ordered to fall back a short distance under cover. To remain in certain capture, to retreat was almost certain death. Few, except the wounded and dead, were left behind. Here, these brave North Carolinians "stood, few and faint, but fearless still." The enemy did not follow or show any disposition to leave their defenses. Our loss in officers and men was great. All the field officers of the Twenty-First were killed and wounded except Colonel W. W. Kirkland, who was after this fight, promoted to Brigadier-General. Here the lamented Colonel Isaac E. Avery, commanding the brigade, laid down his noble life on the altar of his country's freedom. Lieutenant-Colonel Rankin was badly wounded and left in the hands of the enemy, where he remained a prisoner throughout the war. It is recorded in Vol. 125, Official Records Union and Confederate Armies, that Private Oliver P. Rood was awarded a medal for conspicuous bravery in capturing a flag of the Twenty-First North Carolina Regiment in a charge on our lines at Gettysburg 3 July. As I have just stated above, a most frightful and determined conflict raged on the night of the 2nd. the ground was strewn with dead and wounded. Man after man went down, among them Major Alexander Miller, who picked up the flag after the first color-bearer fell. He soon shared the fate of the former. It was soon taken up by J. W. Bennett, Company F, who was, also, in quick succession, shot down. The colors were then taken by the writer and very soon after this, we fell back into the works, which we had just passed over a few paces and continued such a terrific fire upon the enemy, that their rifle was completely silenced, the enemy crouching behind their works. About this time Corporal Eli Wiley, Company M, asked permission to take the flag, saying he did not see it when it fell. It was given to him and after the writer had gone a few paces along the line, orders were given to retire at once, which was accomplished under a severe fusillade. We had retreated about twenty-five yards when I saw the flag for the last time. Corporal Wiley was killed, and left, together with the flag, in the lines of the enemy. In the darkness and confusion the flag was not missed until we had rallied under cover about the distance of two hundred yards. The enemy did not follow, or show any disposition to do so, as stated above. Soon all firing ceased and the battle was ended. This was 2 July, and as Private Rood claims to have captured the flag in a charge on our lines, 3 July, it is evident that he did not capture the flag in battle at all, as our regiment was not engaged after 2 July. Therefore, it is conclusive that he picked up the flag on the battle field on the following day, the 3rd, and it is altogether probable that he took the flag from the body of the dead hero who had been cold and stark in death for many hours. The regiment, brigade or corps, were not at any time charged by the enemy. On the other hand, the charging was all done by the Confederates and we reached Cemetery Heights, trading possession of their works, and if the attack had been pressed on our right, the enemy could have been prevented from concentrating upon the brigades of Hoke and Hayes, compelling them to retire, after having victory in their grasp. For details, see General Early's report. We do not wish to detract from an antagonist any distinction, but the records should be kept straight. 4 July we left Gettysburg, our division bringing up the rear of Lee's army. Halted at Hagerstown several days, then retired across the Potomac.

In J. Elmo Young's Memoirs published in THE HERITAGE, Volume X, 1983, he states that he came to Hot Spring County from Rutherford County, TN, with his father, mother, brother Robert and sister Minnie in November 1881. His grandparents, along with his father and 2 sisters, Rosa and Jennie, went from North Carolina to Rutherford County, TN in the early 1870's. Info obtained from Pat Hall at findagrave.com.

Here are a few snippets from the memoirs of my grandfather, J. Elmo Young. The memoirs were written by my grandfather in 1959, seven years before his death at the age of 89.

"My Grandfather Young, whose name was John M., and my grandmother, whose name was Julia, was born in North Carolina, and I have heard my grandmother speak of Winston Salem thousands of times, and at this time I have a granddaughter who is living in that city.

My grandfather and grandmother, together, with my father and their daughters, named Rosa and Jennie came to Tennessee, probably in the early 1870's.

In what manner they came, I do not know, and regret that I did not get full details from my Grandmother Young in her lifetime.

Anyway, they came to Rutherford County, Tennessee, which is some 10 or 15 miles from Murfreesboro, and near a little village called Triune, and I have heard my grandmother call this name "Triune" probably a million times.

My grandfather and their two daughters came to Malvern, probably about the year 1878 or 1879, and as I remember her telling about it, they lived on what is now Sullenberger Street, near the Sullenberger home.

My father and mother and we three children, my younger brother Robert, and my sister Minnie, came as I understand, in November, 1881.

When my grandfather came to Malvern, he did so under the glaring advertisement of the St. Louis Iron Mountain Railway, and they had what they called an "immigrant house" for new arrivals, and which at that time was near the depot in Malvern...

The immigrant house was for the purpose of giving immigrants an opportunity to remain there until they could get located, and what I understand was a few days for my grandparents.

When my father's family came here in 1881, we lived on a tract near Malvern on what is now a part of Railroad Addition...

As I recall, in 1883 we moved to another residence on the farm of Mr John W Keithlands, known as the "Doug McCoy" place....

It was while living at this place that my sister died, who was born after we came to Arkansas. She is buried in Rockport Cemetery...

We moved on the farm of Mr Rutherford (D H Rutherford), where we lived for four years, and while living at this location, my sister Annie was born in the year 1890...

My Grandfather Young moved back to Magnet Cove in 1895, and lived on the Henry farm until his death in 1896. He was sixty-nine years of age, and his name was John M. Young...

At the time of my birth in Tennessee, as I referred to, my Aunt Jennie (My father's sister) had read the novel written by Augusta Evans, in which the hero was Saint Elmo, and the heroine was Edna Earle, and she liked it so well, she gave me this name.

As I remember in November, 1899 at the home of Mr T R McHenry on South Main Street, I first met Edna Earle Murry; she had the name of the heroine and we became good friends, and we were married on June 16, 1904..."

J. Elmo and Edna Earle Murry Young had the following children:

Although this information is not pertinent to your geneological research you may find it inte resting. Again, from my grandfather's memoirs:

"In September, 1901, a good friend of mine, Mr Fred Turner and I made a trip to Buffalo, Ne w York to attend the Pan-American Exposition.

This was a wonderful trip. We were there in September, 1901 and we were just outside the buil ding when President McKinley was shot, and we heard the shot very distinctly. He was taken t o a residence nearby, where we were staying, and lingered several days after we went home . I remember the event very clearly."
