Note:

An intelligent German traveller named Shoepff, who travelled through the United States in 1783-1784, whilst staying for a time at Lancaster, became acquainted with Mr. Henry. He says: "I was shown a machine by Mr. Henry, intended for the propelling of boats, etc., 'but,' said Mr. Henry, 'I am doubtful whether such a machine would find favour with the public, as every one considers it impracticable to make a boat move against wind and tide;' but that such a boat will come into use, and navigate on the waters of the Ohio and Mississippi he had not the least doubt, though the time had not yet arrived of its being appreciated and applied." A sketch of the machine, with the boilers, etc., made by Mr. Henry in 1779, is said to be still in the possession of his heirs.

"William Henry, the eldest of their eight children, was born in Chester County, May 19, 1729. Shortly after the death of his father he removed to Lancaster, where he engaged in the manufacture of fire-arms, and furnished supplies to the Indian traders. As armourer of the troops of General Braddock and Forbes, he accomplished the expeditions against Fort Duquesne. He took an active part in the public affairs of his county and the State, and throughout the Revolution ardently espoused the cause of the colonists, and filled many offices of honor and trust. He was commissioned justice of the peace, in 1758, 1770, and 1777, and associate justice of the common pleas, quarter sessions and orphans' court, November 18, 1780. In 1776 he was elected a member of the Assembly, and from October 17 to December 4, 1777, served in the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania, and as county treasurer from 1777 to his death. His appointment as armourer of the State is dated September 4, 1778, and he was selected one of the commissioners to limit prices of merchandise, in the convention called by meeting at Hartford, Connecticut, October 29, 1779, to assemble at Philadelphia, January 5, 1780. He was also appointed dedimus potestatem in 1778, and 1781. As assistant commissary general in 1778 he was of great service to the army in the field. He served two terms in the Old Congress, 1784-1785. In 1767 he was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society, was one of the first members of the Society for Promoting Agriculture, and a founder of the Juliana Library of Lancaster. As an ingenious inventor he enjoyed a high reputation, particularly in the application of steam for motive power, and in 1771 he invented the screw-auger.

William Henry, in January of 1756, married Ann, daughter of Abraham and Ursula (Taylor) Wood, who was born January 24, 1734. Ann Wood was a great-granddaughter of John and Barbara Bevan, of Treverigg, Glamorganshire, Wales, who with their children in 1683 came to Pennsylvania, where he took up a large tract of land in the Welsh Tract, in what was then Philadelphia county. He was elected as a member of the Assembly for the years 1687, 1695, 1699 and 1700, and commissioned a justice of the peace in 1685 and 1689. After making several visits to his native country he finally resumed his residence there and died at the ripe age of eighty years. His daughter Jane married, December 1, 1678, George Wood, of Darby, Chester county, who was commissioned a justice in 1724 and 1726, and served in the Assembly 1704, 1710, 1712 and 1717. Their son Abraham, born March 2, 1702, and died 1753, was the father of Mrs. Henry.

William Henry died at Lancaster, December 15, 1786, and Ann his wife, March 8, 1799. They had issue thirteen children, of whom William Henry (2d) was the eldest."

During the Indian wars which desolated Pennsylvania from 1755 to 1760, he was appointed principal armourer of the troops then called into service, which position procured for him the honour of having his name given to a fort in Berks County constructed by the Proprietary Government, on the then frontier settlements, under the immediate supervision of Benjamin Franklin, to whom Mr. Henry was well known, and who appreciated his services in that eventful period.

Text: Having a mechanical turn of mind, the inventions and the applications of steam by Watt being then much discussed, the idea of its application to the propelling of boats, vehicles, etc., so engrossed his mind that on his return to his home in Lancaster he began the construction of a machine, the motive power of which was steam. In 1763 Mr. Henry completed the machine, which was attached to a boat with paddles, and with it he experimented on the Canastoga River, near Lancaster; but the boat was by some accident sunk.

This was the first attempt that ever had been made to apply steam to the propelling of boats.

Text: Notwithstanding the ill luck that attended the first attempt in an undertaking of the practicability of which he had not the least doubt, he constructed a second model, with improvements on the first; and among the records of the Pennsylvania Philosophical Society is to be found a design, presented by him in 1782, of a machine, the motive power of which was steam.

William Henry, though unsuccessful with the experiments with his first boat on the Canastoga River, thus very probably originated the idea of the steam-boat at least five years before Fulton was born. The following extract may throw some light on the subject:

"Dec. 2nd, 1785. At a special meeting of the Philosophical Society, John Fitch was personally presented to the members. Desirous of having the opinion of men of weight at that period, he consulted several, among whom was Mr. Henry, of Lancaster, 'who informed me,' says Fitch, 'that he was the first person who had thought of applying steam to vessels; that he had conversed with Mr. Paine, author of "Common Sense," and some time after, Mr. Henry, thinking more seriously of the matter; was of the opinion that it might be perfected, and accordingly made some drafts, which he laid before the Philosophical Society' "

Fitch evidently made the first successful experiment in the propelling of boats by steam; but William Henry has probably the honour of originating the idea, and building the first steamboat ever built in the United States. Fitch improved on Mr. Henry's model, and Fulton improved on both.

William Henry was born in Chester County, Penn., in the year 1729. His father, John Henry, with his parents, and two brothers, Robert and James, emigrated to this country from the north of Ireland in or about the year 1719 or 1720. The father of James, Robert, and John was a native of Scotland, but for a short time previous to his coming to this country had resided in one of the northern counties of Ireland. Upon the arrival of the family in Pennsylvania they settled in Chester County, where, as before stated, the subject of our sketch was born. At an early age he became a resident of Lancaster, Penn., where he learned the business of gunsmith: After serving his apprenticeship he began business on his own account, and in a few years became the principal gunsmith in the province. During the Indian wars which desolated Pennsylvania from 1755 to 1760, he was appointed principal armourer of the troops then called into service, which position procured for him the honour of having his name given to a fort in Berks County constructed by the Proprietary Government, on the then frontier settlements, under the immediate supervision of Benjamin Franklin, to whom Mr. Henry was well known, and who appreciated his services in that eventful period.

In the year 1760 Mr. Henry went to England on business connected with his vocation, and there he remained for some time. Having a mechanical turn of mind, the inventions and the applications of steam by Watt being then much discussed, the idea of its application to the propelling of boats, vehicles, etc., so engrossed his mind that on his return to his home in Lancaster he began the construction of a machine, the motive power of which was steam. In 1763 Mr. Henry completed the machine, which was attached to a boat with paddles, and with it he experimented on the Canastoga River, near Lancaster; but the boat was by some accident sunk.

This was the first attempt that ever had been made to apply steam to the propelling of boats. Notwithstanding the ill luck that attended the first attempt in an undertaking of the practicability of which he had not the least doubt, he constructed a second model, with improvements on the first; and among the records of the Pennsylvania Philosophical Society is to be found a design, presented by him in 1782, of a machine, the motive power of which was steam. An intelligent German traveller named Shoepff, who travelled through the United States in 1783-1784, whilst staying for a time at Lancaster, became acquainted with Mr. Henry. He says: "I was shown a machine by Mr. Henry, intended for the propelling of boats, etc., 'but,' said Mr. Henry, 'I am doubtful whether such a machine would find favour with the public, as every one considers it impracticable to make a boat move against wind and tide;' but that such a boat will come into use, and navigate on the waters of the Ohio and Mississippi he had not the least doubt, though the time had not yet arrived of its being appreciated and applied." A sketch of the machine, with the boilers, etc., made by Mr. Henry in 1779, is said to be still in the possession of his heirs - Excerpt from the book "Makers of America - Robert Fulton - His Like and its Results" - by Robert H. Thurston - Dodd, Mead, and Company Publishers - New York - 1891 - Chapter II - Early Experiments In Steam-Navigation. Can be found on the following website:

1. Note: Greene Co., TN 1780's & Cooke Co., TN Militia 1798. George served in the Cocke Co., TN militia with Major Peter Fine and his son, Lt. Lidgard Fine. [There is a good explanation of the naming of the children. There are also a number of Cynthia Annes in the family, later,] George Henry was commissioned Ensign in the Cocke Co. Militia on 5 April, 1798.

Note: George was part of a militia led by Vinot Fine when they went after some maurading indians. Vinot and another man were killed in the engagement. While they were still under attack by the indians, they buried the two bodys in a frozen creek. A week later, they returned to retrieve the bodies, but the creek had thawed and the bodies were gone. The engagement took place approximatly where Interstate 40 crosses Fines Creek right across the Tennessee border in Haywood County North Carolina.

2. Text: Ancestor chart by Benton D. Henry March 4, 1999.

3. Benton D. Henry is my major source for Henry information. He has researched the Henry family for over thirty years. I quote him directly on most of the entries concerning the Henry's . I received the below quoted text on November 13, 1998. I agree with Benton; accuracy is important.

"I'm delighted to have been able to share my research with you, gathered the hard way, bit by bit, over three decades -- that's what it's for. In the search for ancestors (like life in general) the giving is its own reward. But I've found that the more I give, the more comes back to me. The old philosophy is true I So I ask only that you transcribe my work accurately. In places where I have speculated, be careful not to forget the "maybe". (We have to be careful what we say in genealogy - over time, the "maybe" stuff has a. way of becoming accepted, and repeated as fact, in spite of anything we do...) And- make your sources clear: Give me credit for what was mine; anything added, make it clear that this info. didn't come from me!"

I will endeavor to make it clear that anything not coming from Benton will be so noted. I respect him and his many years of devotion to the search.

The source for the burial spot for George and "Annie" was another cousin. Benton says: "NOBODY knows for certain where old George HENRY and "Annie" are buried.... Yes, probably one of our cousins said it. But to state flatly that old George is "buried at Henry Cemetery" is playing fast and loose with the facts. No one has found their gravestones there. We do know that old George Henry and our ggg. gf. John Henry b. c1788 were listed together in Capt. Williams' Company in the 1812 "White Co. Tax List; and a deed shows that John Henry was living at the "Headwaters of Calfkiller" in Jan., 1817, shortly before old George died:

According to Benton D. Henry, George served as an Ensign in the Cocke Co, Tennessee Militia in 1798 with a Major Peter Fine, and his son, Lt. Lidgard Fine could suggest a reason for the children's names. It is believed that Vinet Henry b. 1793 was named after Vinet Fine of Cocke Co., who was killed by Indians.

Given Name: George Washington "Taylor"

Surname: Henry

Sex: M

Birth: April 29, 1848 in Monterey, Putnam County, TN

Note: From Ronald Edward Callis: Taylor Henry is on the 1860 census. The George Washington Henry that died in Texas in 1888 was actually George Washington Henry, Jr., the son of George Washington Henry and the grandson of George Lafayette Henry. Taylor's death is unknown. In the early 1890's Taylor Henry left to go clear some land but never returned. His lunch bucket was still found full as well as his axe. This was told to my mother, Naomi Ruth Henry Callis, by her great aunt Hemery "Daisy" Overstreet Clark, the half-sister of Lillian Ann Overstreet Henry, the daughter-in-law of George Washington "Taylor" Henry.
