

Descendants of William B. Herald

Generation No. 1

1. WILLIAM B.¹ HERALD was born Abt. 1834 in Tennessee, and died Bet. 1877 - 1880. He married MARGARET "PEGGY" CLINE Bet. 1857 - 1860 in Smyth County, Virginia, daughter of JOHN CLINE and SOPHIA CATRON. She was born January 1841 in Smyth County, Virginia, and died September 20, 1910 in Ada, Mercer County, West Virginia.

Notes for WILLIAM B. HERALD:

According to the web site "The 45th Virginia Infantry" <<http://www.gwest.org/45thva.htm>>:

On April 12, 1861, Confederate forces began their assault on Fort Sumter, and five days later, Virginia was the 8th state to secede from the Union. On May 29, 1861, William was enlisted as Private in Virginia's 45th Infantry Regiment. The regiment was mustered into Confederate service a few days later. The 45th Infantry regiment was formed with men from Tazewell, Wythe, Grayson, Carroll, and Bland counties. William served with Company H, also known as "The Tazewell Rangers" led by Capt. Edwin H. Harman. Company H was comprised of mainly Tazewell County men.

The 45th Virginia Infantry participated in several engagements during William's term of service. They are identified below.

August 12, 1861 - contact at Tyree's Tavern near Big Sewell Mountain, Fayette Co., W.Va.

August 20, 1861 - encounter at The Hawk's Nest near Gauley Bridge, Fayette Co.

Aug 26-27, 1861 - action at Carnifex Ferry, Nicholas Co., WV

Sept 10, 1861 - action at Carnifex Ferry.

One of the decisive battles fought for the control of Western Virginia was at Carnifex Ferry on September 10, 1861. General Floyd had had extensive fortifications constructed on a jagged strip of land formed by a bend in the Galley River and considered these fortifications sufficient to withstand any advance by the Union troops.

On August 31, over 6,000 Union troops under the command of General Jacob Cox marched south from Clarksburg to attack the Confederate position in the Kanawha Valley. On September 10, these Union troops engaged in a day-long battle with approximately 2,000 Confederate forces. Repeated attempts by Federal troops failed to defeat the outnumbered Confederates and control of the Kanawha Valley seemed firmly in Confederate hands. However, during that night, General Floyd decided to conduct a "retrograde movement" south to Greenbrier County.

Then General Wise, under the command of General Floyd, was ordered to retreat to Big Sewell Mountain. Arguments continued to rage between Floyd and Wise, with Wise finally being ordered back to Richmond. Some have said that the word battle between Wise and Floyd was as intense as that waged between the North and South. Finally on September 29th, General Lee consolidated Confederate Forces at Big Sewell.

An indecisive confrontation between Union General William S. Rosecrans and General Lee settled nothing and Rosecrans withdrew. Cold weather and a threatened attack on Staunton prevented General Lee from pressing the advantage.

The Western Virginia campaign, memorable for the ultimate loss of the area by the Confederacy and the ultimate control of the Kanawha Valley and much of Western Virginia by the Union, was memorable for another event.

On September 12, 1861, William was listed as a deserter. Sometime during the fighting, William sustained injuries and could not be accounted for.

Notes for MARGARET "PEGGY" CLINE:

Tazewell Republican, Tazewell County, Virginia, 23 Sep 1910

"Mrs. Margaret Herold, better known to the people of this place as "Mother" Herold, was run over and instantly killed by a freight train near Ada, five miles east of Bluefield, W. Va., on last Tuesday afternoon, and her blind grandson, Jake, who was sitting on the track with her at the time, was painfully but not seriously injured. Her remains were brought here yesterday afternoon and interred in the new cemetery north of town. The deceased had lived in Tazewell for a number of years and still made this her home, and had merely gone to visit her daughter, Mrs. Eliza Chapman, at Ada, when the accident which cost her her life overtook her."

Tazewell County Heritage, Vol I, Tazewell County, Virginia 1799-1995, Project of Tazewell County Historical Society (1995) <HeraldVA-0052>:

After his father, a Confederate soldier, had died of wounds suffered toward the end of the Civil War, John Herald married Hallie Jane Mulkey and continued to operate a farm in Thompson Valley, Tazewell County, Virginia. There, they raised their seven boys and five girls: John (Jr.), William, George, Oscar, Felix, Jesse, Robert, Osceola, Margie, Julie, Donia, and Nannie.

John Herald, Sr., died at home following a protracted illness in 1927. Fire destroyed the original farmhouse in 1935. A smaller house was built for Hallie Jane (born July 20, 1848) and she died at home in 1937. Both are buried in the family cemetery on the farm. John and Hallie Jane Herald's twelve children brought them sixty grandchildren.

Today, although a number of Herald grandchildren and great-grandchildren still live in the Tazewell County area, many more live throughout the United States.

Notes for CHARLES JACKSON HERALD:
Tazewell County Heritage, Vol I, Tazewell County, Virginia 1799-1995, Project of Tazewell County Historical Society (1995):

Clyde Jackson Herald, the son of Jesse Franklin (Deck) Herald and Minnie Leer Hall, married Aileen Bowling, daughter of Melvin Crocket Bowling and Julie Mae Booth, in 1958. The Heralds and the Bowlings were all Tazewell County Natives. Deck Herald farmed for C.W. Boyd, Sam Leece, and Frank Harman. He and his family lived in the Frog Level vicinity before moving to Steele Lane in Tazewell. M.C. Bowling worked on the Norfolk and Western railroad for Belcher Lumber Company.

Clyde has one sister, Margaret. She married Herbert Amburgey, and they had on son, Roger. Clyde's brothers are: Howard Smith (deceased) who married Della Hall, and had three children, Howard, Katie, and Betsy; John E., married Margaret Hubble, and had three children, Johnny, Linda, and Wayne; Carl Preston who did not marry; William Reese, married Marie McGlothlin; Walter Curtis who married Janice Duncan, and had four children, Ricky, Gary, Karen, and Tina.

Aileen has two brothers and two sisters. They are Thomas, who married Elizabeth Martin; Evelyn who married Claude Johnson (deceased), and had three children, Roger Lee, Randy, and Kathy; Virginia who married Sam Mabe, and had four children, Linda, Johnny, Jackie, and Billy; Robert who married Edith Young (both, now deceased) who had Barbara Jean, Johnny, Jackie, and a set of twins.

Clyde and Aileen attended Tazewell County schools. He is a member of Main Street Methodist Church and she attends Fincastle Baptist Church.

Clyde has worked for over thirty years for Miss Ollie Kate Brittain, the G.R. (Buddy) Britains, and the A.G. StClair, Jr. family. His loyalty and dependability are outstanding traits and he is sincerely appreciated.
