Wiscasset & Pownalborough History by Fannie Chase. Pg.9 : "Bradbury's Cove- named for Josiah Bradbury, an early settler- which indentation begins west of the at the Post Office (Custom House) and in former years extended as far as the fence which formerly bound the land of Carroll T. Berry. At that time there was a shipyard located in this cove at which Jacob Woodman used to work as a master builder. The creek was later filled in so that now neither the bridge, which spanned it, nor the cove, remains.

"Wiscasset in Pownalborough"; author Fannie Chase

Describing the Pleasant St. George & Marilyn Jones family home

There is known to have been a shipyard in the tidal cove, where in the eighteenth century the river indented the shore almost as far as Main Street or as far as the south fence bounding the land now owned by Carroll T. Berry. This was originally the Kingsbury shipyard.

John Kingsbury, son of Col. John Kingsbury, was born in Newburyport in July, 1748. At the age of twenty he married and very shortly afterward brought his wife to Wiscasset, where after residing for a brief space of time with his mother in the old Kingsbury home on Main Street (moved later to give place to the Nickels house) he bought land and erected a small house on the lot between Court and Pleasant streets. There, having learned a shipwright's trade from his brother-in-law, John Hues, he started a shipyard and carried on shipbuilding. The ways or timbers on which the vessels were launched, are said to have been just back of where is now the Congregational vestry.

In this house at least two of Kingsbury's children were born. His daughter Emma was born in 1770, and his son John Kingsbury, the rigger, who was wont to say that he was born in the 11th year of the reign of His Majesty, George III.

About the time of the war of the American Revolution the business of John Kingsbury, Sr. became so reduced that he sold his house and land to Jacob Woodman and removed to some wild land about a mile and a half from the village, on what is now the Gardiner road, which place was afterwards the home of his grandson, Rhodes Kingsbury.

Notes for CARLY SUYAPA JONES:

[Merged.Brewster.FTW]

Carly was found abandoned in the Suyapa Basilica in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, CA. on Our Lady of Fatima Feast Day May 12, 1994 by a cleaning lady. She was turned over to the Honduran child welfare agency. She was named by the (Priest) Fatima Suyapa because Our Lady of Fatima was patron saint of the church, Suyapa Basilica. Carly was named for the Suyapa virgin to whom the Virgin Mary appeared in the 1700s. On Nov. 28th 1777 a cedar statue 6 centimeters long was found of the Lady Suyapa in the town of El Piliguin. The first chapel was built in 1780. Feb. 3rd is the most important Catholic Holiday in Honduras which is the day she appeared.
