Notes for SARAH WARING:

MEMOIR ON THE DEATH IF SARAH WIFE OF SAMUEL BAKER

Of Hollowell

Committed to writing by her daughter Abigail

"My beloved mother was attacked with the painful illness which terminated her existence in this vale of tears on the 14th-3rd mo.-1824. Her complaint which proved to be an enlargement of the liver, continued to be severe for nearly three months, bringing her in all appearances at times near her close in time, when contrary to our expectations she began to recover so that she rode out and attended meeting several times; seemed happy and in good health, we began to entertain hopes of her perfect recovery."

Eliza Baker wrote thus "In the 8th month, my dear prevailed upon my sister Abby and Ann to attend half meeting at Yonge St. They very reluctantly left home in parting with her for son long. I was happy in her company, and shall never forget that time." Abigail resumes; - "But alas, how soon were those hopes blasted, for about the middle of the 9th month the disorder returned with increased violence, praying on her delicate constitution with redoubled force. Great indeed was her bodily pain which she bore with true Christian patience and resignation; her natural cheerfulness, except when she was in great pain never having forsaken her. Many were her pious expression during her illness. I often wished to take them down in writing when they were expressed, which the large portion of care that fell to out lot prevented me from doing. My dear mother during the course of her illness was very much concerned about her family, they seemed the only tie she had on earth; it was hard for her to give the up....."

My beloved mother often called us to her bedside, giving us good advice, and admonishing us to serve the Lord in our youthful days. She often spoke if the little children when she was too weak to see them. Once thinking she was near her departure she called for all her children and with solemn resignation bade them all farewell, until she came to the youngest (Joseph) the nearly two years old; she seemed much affected and said "the last kids poor mother is to have, dear Baby, Lord bless thee".

Another time she called her three youngest daughters (Jane, Hannah, Maria) to her bedside and said "my dear children you are going to loose your poor mother, then there will be none to teach thee to be good except thy dear father and sisters, mind what they say to thee, be good and learn to fear the Lord, and on no account tell an untruth; read often in the bible and strive to understand it, be kind and loving to each other do not forget me when I am gone and remember what I have said to thee". She then affectionately kissed them and told them to sit down together and think of what she had told them. Then turning to her three eldest daughter (Abigail, Ann, Eliza) as we stood by her bedside she said "My dear girls take care of the little babies, you must be their mother now bring them up in plainness, take then to meeting that are old enough to go, thee will have a great deal of care on thee my dears, I have no doubt but the Lord will be they director. The 22nd-12th. Mo-1824 my dear mother passed very comfortably about six o'clock in the morning following a sudden change took place, she the being taken with a slight convulsive fit. They're appearing scarcely any symptoms of life." Later Samuel Baker added these lines.

"Here the dear narrator of my beloved wife sayings and sufferings breaks off from her interesting theme which records the foregoing under immediate notice and it therefore appeared incumbent that while I am transcribing I should make some addition which may have escaped her knowledge through the anxiety occasioned by the closing scene of her dear mothers valuable life. I apprehend my dear daughter up to the forenoon of the 29th-12th mo-1824 and which agrees with some of her conclusive remarks. About five o'clock the same evening at the desire of some present, I retired to my chamber for a little repose, under feelings of resignation to the Divine Will as regarded her my earthly treasure; and being favored with a calm not to be forgotten, I fell into a sweet sleep;" I awoke and hastened to her chamber about seven o'clock in the evening and found her yet breathing; while solemn silence pervaded all present sitting at one side, still in silence; after sometime she asked the friend what o'clock it was, the friend answered "twenty minutes to eight" She then said in a low voice "I am going" and so remained, so still and quite that we could not discover the exact time when she breathed her last precious breath. Her remains were interred in Friends Burying Ground at West Lake, Hollowell after a solemn Meeting 31st-day 12th mo-1824. Thus ended the sufferings of a faithful wife, a loving and exemplary mother, a sincere and consistent friend to her neighbors and fellow professors, anxiously desiring the promotion and prosperity of truth and righteousness. Once during my wife's' confinement she said "My dear, thou art going to lose me, and be left alone; take care of these tender lambs committed to thy charge. Be not too anxious after the world, for I believe there is yet great blessing in store for them". Finding that some of the foregoing had been kept on loose papers I have thus transcribed it as a valuable memorial for the perusal of our dear children when I am also removed from these scenes of sorrow and probation into an endless eternity.

Notes for Abigail BAKER:

Little is known of Abigail's adult life. An unverified source states she married George Penrose in 1829.

George Penrose, a Quaker, evidently made more than one crossing to Upper Canada. A letter written by James Clothier Mullett to his Grandmother Clothier in Street Somerset, dated Jan 16, 1825 states:

This letter will be carried to her by a Friend returning to Ireland via New York and Bristol whose name is George Penrose.

A letter written by Samuel Baker to George and Abbie Penrose in Ireland is dated 1836 and indicates that they had previously established a home in Prince Edward County. There is no record of a family... Beatrice Bridgen's work.

Hollowell. 12th-1st Mo. - 8th-11Mo-1836

Inclusive

My Dear George,

I once more take the pleasure of sitting down to drop thee a line in grateful acknowledgement of the receipt of thine and dear Abbie's of 2nd-30th, 8th-mo last inclusive, it came to hand the 22nd-10th mo last. The contents thereof I notice with due respect; both as relative in the remarks of the conduct of I.B. and also about bedstead for Samuel, and Sallans and Fieldhouse' debts, the latter of which I do not give up as I have got his not renewed and the other day received in part one dollar with promises of more shortly, what ever I get from him shall be to thy credit. Thy furniture's are not yet disposed of though I repeatedly applied to Alex Allen (the only auctioneer here) to dispose of them, but in vain, and finally the unfortunate man has fallen victim to excessive drinking; he died suddenly a few weeks ago - so that I see no other way than to turn that part of thy property into money than by setting a price on each of the articles as per list of them in thy possession that and on receipt there of if I find that I can afford it I will make up the amount as soon as is in my power and send it to thee and give the articles to my children. I think they are all in a state of preservation except the well - bucket. I sent a pair of blankets and a white counter-pane in a box with sixty books in 7th mo last agreeable to thy directions which I hope arrived safe to and, I have been anxiously looking for thy long promised letter after thy return from England, but when I consider the frequent necessity of our correspondence about business I am the better satisfied about the delay as postages run up fast. Since my last which thou hast received I have spared no pains in induce W. Rorke to further payment but without effect up to the present time of narrative though he still keeps me in expectation of a further if not final settlement ere long and I do not see any better way for me to act than to keep still persuading him of the necessity of his compliance and sometimes with the assurance that I must press him to it by other means if he does not soon come to a settlement. This I am writing under expectation of his soon handing me something agreeable to promise. His brother Samuel has got a store department called in his own name, and, he William has opened a land office in the premises and had become a great public writer of legal documents etc.

Thinking it right to turn again to the subject of thy furniture and in small space to put down the several articles now remaining agreeable to the lists namely- 2 pairs blankets, 1 chest drawers, 2 green tables, 2 barran stands, 1 commode, 1 1/2 dozen chairs, 1 side table with cupboard, 1 kitchen table, 1 tin canister, 2 sets of candle molds, 1 set kitchen irons, 1 kitchen stove, 1 water fountain, 2 sauce pans, 2 bake pans, 2 pots, 1 gridiron, 2 brass kettles, 1 pair hand irons (which I have sold for 7.s.6d), 1 set tea china, 6 goblets, 6 tumblers, 12 wine glasses, 12 dinner plates, 12 cups and saucers, 6 supper plates, 6 muffin plates, 2 large dishes, 2 small do, 4 oval pie do, 2 round barrans, 2 blue barrans and covers, 6 bowls, 2 pair candle sticks, 6 jugs, 2 pairs flower pots, 2 sugar bowls, 1 set of bed curtains, 1 gardavene bottle, 2 smoothing irons, 1 1/2 dozen knives and forks, 1 knife box, 2 large trays, 2 small trays, (I gave Eliza and Hannah while here) 3 window curtains, 1 gardavene case, 1 desk, 1 pair bellows, 1 crock, 1 carving knife and fork, 3 bedsteads, (Samuel takes the largest low post one), 3 feather beds, each 30,31,38,pounds, weight total 99 pounds.

Thus by placing the value over or after each article the amount can easily be ascertained in small space, this I request thou wilt do in thy next letter. At the same time if I can sell anything at a fair value by private sale I will do so and which is the only way I can see of selling any of them. I wish thee had sold them whilst here, and not for any saving of trouble for me but for thy on satisfaction.

Having thus far proceeded as for business I have to turn to my own domestic concern and lay before thee the subject productive of another heavy trail to my declining state of body and mind under which nothing short of a degree of resignation to the Divine Will would have supported me. I wish to be as tender of thine and dear Abbie's feelings as the nature of the case will permit and they're fore desire by degrees to lead you into the particulars as follows. On 22nd 11 mo last I went by steamboat to Belleville to accompany dear Eliza and her baby on her way home after being here about a month on a visit, left my dear Maria to keep house in her absence, they had got a comfortable roomy addition to their first building and it appears that dear Maria anxious to have the house in order for the arrival of her sister exposed herself when she should have been more careful and took cold which settled so suddenly on her vitals that when Eliza got home she was alarmed at her appearance though she was up and about. Eliza endeavored to know the cause of her complaint, which appeared to be an obstinate internal obstruction, but she had not told the particulars. Thus she lingered for some days still growing worse until at length she desired William to bring her home saying she wanted to go directly to father. No time was lost, a sleigh and horses prepared, and in charge of William Mullett got about six miles on her way when she had to give up and stop at a friends house where she took to her bed. Eliza came to her and Dr. Ridley was sent for but all to no purpose, there she continued rapidly advancing to her final close, seemed quite sensible and resigned without much symptoms of bodily pain though for some time deprived of the faculty of speech. She gently and almost imperceptibly glided away I hope to her eternal rest at about 10 o'clock on the night of 30th-11th mo, and now interred in Friends' Burying Ground at West Lake, 3rd-12th mo, and now occupying the confines of the grave next to her dear sister Ann so that they with their dear mother and my two grand children now have five gone before me while remain the monument of that mercy to whose Divine ordering may I ever say "Amen" aged 17 years 5 months and 19 days. Thus like a lamb falling into a sweet sleep she seemed like stealing out of this world of trouble to participate in the joyful change uniting of the Spirits of the Blest. These reflections curb my sorrow; thoughts like these console my woe. He that lends should he not borrow? Or can the grateful heart say "no".

As soon as the Dr's opinion was known which was in the afternoon of the day before she departed John Mullett set off around the head of the bay and got to my house about two in the morning with news that I should hardly see her alive. I hastened away by the same route and got there the following morning at three o'clock when I found my dearly beloved child in her coffin. I hired a sleigh and brought her home to my house at about one in the following morning, the coldest time we have had this winter, but was so over come and unwell that I had to stay in bed and cot see my dear Maria laid in her grave, here ends my flattering hopes of having her attend my latest wants in life when I may be deprived of all my other kind affectionate daughters.

This may inform thee and dear Abbie that Hannah and James have laid their intention marriage with each other before out last monthly meeting. So that here I shall be deprived of another in her company, but can't say much about Jane except by surmise and the same about Arthur who expects to get a farm next to his brothers William and James perhaps- not suddenly: I have been watching the Emigrant paper for the arrival of Sally Taylor but no account yet. J. Waring remains much in the same delicate state of health, mostly confined to the house, all communications between out families seems mostly cut off except that I went to see him, in a weak state after a fit of illness; so that the state of things is so great a trouble to me that I would make reasonable sacrifice to re-establish friendship if it could be permanent grounds though I am not the aggressor of anything connected with the differences, which I stated in my last letter ----- but enough of it.

It has been reported among some of our friends here that a number of pamphlets bearing the signature of Anna Galbraith and others have been sent over and circulated in and about New York disclaiming a belief in the existence of Divine Inspiration immediately communicated and making the Holy Scriptures the sole and primary rule of faith and practice as appertaining to the salvation of man----- surely is it possible this can be correct do say how it is if thou knowest ----- I cannot, I do not believe it.

11th mo. 1st I received a letter from William Baker Mount Melliuk stating that his father was deceased and left 100pounds each to Samuel and Thomas. Samuel is dead some time and if William is sending 100 pounds to Thomas let it come through thy hands as before if thee thick proper that I may turn over to W.H. to pay it by his hand or note to Thomas if no better can be done. I must leave room for better news when it comes.

(A break here in the letter, evidently written at a later date)

Kingston 11th mo 8th day.

Better later than never, on the fifth inst. W.H. enabled to purchase the enclosed bill of exchange on T. Wilson C. London. 81 pounds, in a few days shall sent part and write more fully----- this cost 11% premio 99 pounds, 18 shillings. Draw on me at 30 days in favor of William Baker, Mount Melliuk for 100 pounds sterling if he is sending so much to his brother Thomas as by the time such draft comes to hand I will be ready to pay it: please write to him on the subject, for if he is sending 100 pounds to his brother that his father left him in his will, it will save thee 11 or 12 pounds. Write fully in reply as soon as possible. All well now.

With love to thee and thine I remain thy affectionate father
Samuel Baker.

Donna!

Just looked at your email. This is wonderful corresponding with Gerry and yourself.

That wasn't a gravestone. It was a memorial card stuck into one of my mother's books.

Hugz back! I shall be in touch. My partner and I make magnets and bottlestoppers and we are working on a rooster order for Red Rooster Winery. SO have to go. Next week I shall be, as I think I mentioned in something or other, in the hospital for some procedure so incommunicado. Wish I could take the computer along. Never mind a TV I would sooner have internet and a computer!

William Baker, who died at his home in Colchester on March 30, was born in Dublin in 1858, the seventh child of Samuel and Margaret (O'Brien) Baker. He and his brother Samuel (of Hoshangabad) were educated at Newtown, Waterford, and Bootham at York.

He was a man of a retiring nature, very faithful in the discharge of his varied duties, never too busy to help or counsel those who came to him, a keen Bible student, and essentially a man of prayer. He began his evangelistic work at Strand Street, Dublin, whilst at business at Edmundsons, and when he came to England he found useful service first at Byrom Street, Manchester, and later at Bunhill Fields, London. He was recorded a minister by Devonshire House Monthly Meeting about 1891.

In 1893 he married Mary, elder daughter of Edward Ransome Allen, of Stoke Newington, and became Superintendent of Friends' Missionary Home, Chester House, Clapton, the gift of John Horniman. Whilst there he was made Assistant Clerk to Devonshire House Monthly Meeting, Assistant Secretary to Friends' Syrian Mission, and Secretary of Friends' Bulgarian Mission.

In 1900 he joined the Friends' Home Mission, and for 17 years worked in Kent.

He held many tent and other missions in Meeting Houses and mission halls all over England, and travelled several times in Ireland with Minutes from his Monthly Meetings in Kent, Surrey and Essex.

In 1925 he went to Colchester to help George A. Fox with the Friends Evangelistic Band. Notes for Samuel S BAKER:

Notes for SAMUEL S. BAKER:

Dear Father,-

Two days ago my fortieth birthday was, and as the mile long furrows I rode upon a wheeled plough drawn by four horses leaning to the task of eighteen miles a day or more, my hands guiding them, they the plough my thoughts ran backward in the flight of time to your fortieth birthday thirty years ago or less a day I remember well, though but a lad. How empty your leathern apron hung across the beam beside some familiar piles of hide and pelts, while you the day to keep a holiday went to the neighbours field the timid lads to show how to make ropes of straw the golden wheat to bind, so mixed with thistles that 'twere to tell which was the crop; no mitts your hands protected, but with sleeves rolled back you took your stand behind the reapers heel, and ne'er gave o'er till work and say was done. Strange holiday that was, and what a lesson to the tardy boys; but did the learn it? I fear not. Today this lazy boy rides on a springing seat guiding three horses as they draw the reaper to and fro, reaping the golden grain, and tying not with rope of straw, but twine, the bundles firm and fast, and dropping them not one by one, but four or five in heaps, and only stopping when twenty acres close the day - not four. What changes times have wrought that tell me I am growing old. For near me, in an easy chair there sits one whose face so fresh and smooth in youth is now marked with lines of age, and silvery locks are shining through, the smooth brown hair.. The eye that beams with love, time changes not. The same bright, happy spirit shining through those horbs, the willing hands to deeds of kindness guide, and none that need go wanting, if to her 'tis known. A mothers loving care by her is ever shown. Yes I am growing old - for by my side there works each day in field one who though in stature a man, calls me father (Milton) one who in seed-time or in harvest toil is ever at his post, and anxious there to bear the heaviest yoke, lest it fall on me. And by her mother's side and taller half a head is one that calls me father (Winnie). Each day with her the house-hold duties shares, indoors or out it matters not. and often she with music of her voice and fingers makes her home more than a home in name. And two more call me father, one boy ten, (Randall the other a girl of seven (Ethel). So quick their willing hands and feet answer to a call we think they never tired. And helpful acts of kindness seem a joy to them, God Bless our children; surely I am growing old; if so what of you dear father?

When you look around and think of all your loved ones, some so far away and all so scattered, I wonder not that you have lonely thoughts some times. Your flock so scattered are, you ne'er shall see them all together until they meet with you around the Throne of God, which each of us on earth is daily, hourly, nearing. And some have gone before. And when your toil is ended, and from eastern homes you take your flight up through the Eastern Gates of Paradise and Join the loved ones gone before in their glad song of praise, watch at the Western Gates for loved ones on the way to swell the chorus of Redeeming Love.

EXCERPT FROM A LETTER WRITTEN BY WILLIAM KING BAKER
DATED OCT-12-1903

James Butler, 12th Earl and 1st Duke of Ormonde (1610-1688) was born at London, on or about Oct-19-1610. He was a grandson of Walter, Earl of Ormonde, and eldest son of Thomas, Viscount Thurles and Elizabeth Poynts. His pedigree extends back to Henry II's expedition to Ireland when Theobald Walter received in addition to large estates, the hereditary Butler ship of Ireland and the prestige of Wims; which formed an important part of the vast wealth, which the family always possessed. The title of Ormonde appears to have been granted to James, the "Noble Earl" who by the female side, was a great grandson of Edward I. This title at the request of Henry VIII the 8th Earl resigned to Sir Thomas Boleyn, receiving that of Assory instead, and acquiring that of Ormonde at Boleyn's death. The 9th earl having borne a chief part in the suppression of the Geraldine Rebellion, received a grant of the defeated chieftains lands and in recognition of his further efforts, when Henry threw off his allegiance to the Pope, the title of Viscount Thurles was given him. (see 9th edition Encyclopedia Britannica, p-854 for above and fuller particulars) James Butler, 12th Earl and 1st Duke of Ormonde, referred to above has a daughter Anne Butler. She married Thomas Dallen. They has 2 daughters, one of the Margaret married Thomas Thompson, and they settled near Deeps-on-the-Dlaney, Ireland. This Thomas Thompson was the son of John Thompson from England who settled at Deeps-on-the-Slaney about the time that Cromwell left Ireland. Margaret and Thomas Thompson had 7 children and the youngest of them Anne Thompson - great grand daughter of the Duke - married William Baker and they settled at Carrophlum Wexford, Ireland. They had 5 sons, and the 3rd son Samuel married Sarah Waring and they settled at Carlow, Ireland, afterward moved to Prince Edward County, Hollowell, Upper Canada, in 1819.

To summarize the above.

John Thompson of England settled in Ireland about the time Cromwell left. His son Thomas Thompson married Margaret Dallen. Their daughter Anne Thompson married William Baker. Anne and William's 3rd son Samuel Baker married Sarah Waring - April-22-1801

He married Elizabeth Josephine PECKOVER April 19, 1893, daughter of Alexander PECKOVER and Eliza SHARPLES. She was born April 27, 1859, and died 1930.

Notes for James Doyle PENROSE:

Travelled in Canada. Moved to London with whole family about 1890. R.H.A. (Royal Hibernian Academician): studied at Academy school under Millais. Exhibited at The Royal Academy in 1925. Painted 'The Presence in the Midst' and 'None shall make them Afraid' In looking back over a quarter of a century of deepening friendship, many points of interest in the life and work of our late Friend, James Doyle Penrose, recur to memory. The influence of his late wife and himself in the building up of the meeting at Watford, of which they were members so long, can hardly be over-estimated. Though he seldom took vocal part, his quiet, reverend presence was in itself a ministry, while his kindness towards all, his interest in their affairs, his none-too-common gift of patient listening, made him a real strength. His wide sympathies found further expression in his thought for foreign students living in London. Into his public life our Friend carried his strong convictions, and no fear of unpopularity caused him to yield one iota of principle. This was especially the case during the War, owing to his Peace advocacy and his practical sympathy with the conscientious objectors. At one time a Deputy-Lieutenant for Cambridgeshire, he was for years a magistrate for the counties of Cambridge and Herts, and in this service his Temperance principles found frequent opportunities of expression. Though a life-long Liberal, he refused pressure from influential quarters to become a Parliamentary Candidate; indeed his gentle nature was quite unsuited for the stress and conflict of electoral campaigns. For many years he was the beloved leader of the Adult School at Watford, and he rejoiced to lend a field at Oxhey Grange to the School cricket club. His artistic life was, however, the real revelation of the man. As a young student he lived hard and worked hard. Slowly, with great patience and grit, he made his art the expression of that deep sense of the all-pervading presence and love of God which was his religion. Realising that portraiture and scenery can be made the means of teaching, he never lost sight of his desire to convey the truth. But he was at his best in his subject pictures. Whether in mythological scenes such as "Iduna and the Apples of Youth," in historical works such as "Queen Philippa interceding for the Burghers of Calais," or in those of a more obviously religious character such as "Christian at the Cross" and "Jacob wrestling with the Angel," he showed his love of the beautiful, using that word in the widest sense. The climax of his teaching was reached in two Quaker subjects, "The Presence in the Midst" and "None Shall make them Afraid." The latter tells the old story of the little Quaker community at Easton, New York State, quietly sitting in worship despite the intrusion of the threatening Indians. But the "Presence in the Midst" is his crowning exposition of the essence of Quaker worship. (The story of how it came to be painted is told below.) Many times J.D. Penrose had the joy of receiving messages telling of the help and comfort which this picture brought to weary or stricken souls. And now one who strove to lead others to see and know something of those spiritual ideals which to him were so real, has passed into the Presence of the Eternal beauty, leaving behind him a record of gentle goodness and kindly charm, making "undying music in the world." J.W.H. Theobald

James Doyle Penrose and I were students together at St. John's Wood and later at the Academy School under Millais and other academicians of the older school. Our various working trips in Holland, Belgium, France and Italy are still very vivid in my recollection. During his last illness I spent a week with him in the New Forest, and, sitting by his bedside one evening, I listened to his account of how he painted "The Presence in the Midst." I can offer no more fitting tribute to his memory, nor one of which he would more highly approve.

"One beautiful summer day I went over to Jordans, and, quite alone, sat down in the seat from which the picture was painted," he told me. "I seemed as I contemplated all those who had worshipped there in the past, to be surrounded by them in imagination as if they were gathered there. I pondered on what it was that gave them all their power, for they had power in those bygone times, and then I realised that it was the presence of Christ amongst them – 'The Presence in the Midst.' And I felt there was a subject that I ought to paint; and I did feel that it was a very great undertaking.

"The sunlight streaming through the window threw the shadow of the casement mullion and transom on the wall, and, although I was not conscious of it at the time, it must have been an unconscious inspiration, for years afterwards, it was pointed out to me that this shadow was a cross—an empty cross. The work on the cross was a finished work of redemption, and now He, who once hung there, was the risen, living Christ whose presence may be relied upon where two or three are gathered together in His name."

Such was J.D. Penrose's vision and such his message. He keenly felt the responsibility laid upon him. "Where there is no vision the people perish." J. Walter West

In spite of the inclement weather, some sixty or seventy gathered round the grave and afterwards at the Meeting-house. The occasion seemed one in which primarily the thought of our late Friend's dedication of talent and conspicuous loyalty to his Lord and Saviour was the keynote. Appropriate references were made to Jordans Meeting-house as the setting for "The Presence in the Midst," with which J. Doyle Penrose will always be associated in memory.

Baptism: Moira Methodist Church

Notes for WILLIAM BRIGDEN:
William Brigden and Sarah Jane Wood moved from Ontario, with two of the children, Stillman and Beatrice Alice, in March 1889, to farm near Napinka, Manitoba, until 1906. Annie Bardella (born April 1889) the twins, who died at ten months, Parrie Frost and Mable Pidgeon, were all born there.

The farm was sold and the family lived in Napinka for two and a half years, then moved to Bellville, Ontario, in December of 1909. Beatrice took her first year Arts at Albert College, Dell studied music with Professor Denmark, Parrie took a Commercial course and Mable a special course in Domestic Science. In October, 1910, they moved to Brandon, Manitoba. William dabbled in Real Estate until his death in Dec. 1925. Sarah Jane died in May, 1927.

Dell married Fred Aikens in July, 1912. Parrie married Hazel Heath in 1913. Mable married Tom Hanway, in June, 1919. Beatrice trained in Public Speaking and lectured in the Social Dept. of the Methodist Church for sometime. She moved to Winnipeg after her mother's death and worked as a Civil Servant until she retired.

Parrie was with Eaton's Life Insurance for 32 years until his death in 1956. Hazel passed away in Nov. 1964. Tom Hanway died in 1942, and Mable continued as a Civil Servant in Regina, Saskatchewan until retiring.

Kathleen Rogers - May 22, 2002 Viewers< from MyFamily.com Mullett Ancestry site. There I was, going through some of the letter that my late mother, Margaret Robinson Bailey left and came across one from my great Aunt Hattie Magee who is writing of Beatrice Brigden. She says" The Baker family tree is being distributed. It is complete with some history, family records, and the English family tree that Marguerite (Baker) was instrumental in circulating added. It's altogether a worth while project. Its in loose leaf form so one may make corrections or suggestions. Cousin Frank Wilson who was looking after the publishing of it died May '69 so Beatrice Brigden got another relative, Dr. Longley to help out. They got it together in this form and are asking $4.00 to cover expenses. I have several copies. Wilson planned a more expensive one for $10.00.

Too cool! 05*26*2002 :)

Bertha married Henry Liddell Mabb shortly after he left the NWMP.

Unfortunately we are not sure where or when yet. We know they had a cattle ranch between Wood Mountain and Willowbunch. This is the area where Mabb had been a NWMP. The homestead that Mabb had in Saskatchewan was turned into reserve land at some point and he ended up take out a homestead in the the interlake area in Manitoba. He married Clara Ann Harriet Bird and had three more daughters.

Notes for Wife ?BAKER:

I am looking for information on Milton McIntyre Baker who married my great aunt, Edith Mabel Williams 1879-1965, and lived in Los Angeles, California. I believe he was the son of Samuel Baker and Lucy Randall and the grandson of William Baker and Esther Cunningham. I have found Milton Baker in the 1881 census for Frontenac County, Ontario living with his parents, Samuel and Lucy, and his siblings, Winnie, Ethel and Randall. I think this must be the same Milton Baker who married Edith Mabel because they had two daughters named Ethel and Winnie as well as a son named Ralph. I have found them in the 1920 census for Los Angeles, living with Ethel and Winnie, and Milton's mother, Lucy. I have seen some sources indicating that he had a son named Milton Floyd Baker who was in real estate in Los Angeles. My family does not have any knowledge of him and I am wondering if he was a son from an earlier marriage. Do you have any information on this family?

Obituary SOSA Report 1981:

Molly Braithwaite came to Sidcot from 1923-1926 and then, following family tradition, went on to The Mount. My brother, Ian Black, and I had met her several years earlier, in July 1917, at the first birthday of her cousin Elizabeth Penman (Sidcot 1929-33) in New Barnet. The Black family was in the process of migrating from Edinburgh to the West Country, and en route had rented a house belonging to Elizabeth's grandmother; the "young" Penmans, Frank and Grace (nee Baker, Sidcot 1895-97) were living nearby, and the Braithwaites had come over for the party. We little dreamed that in a few years time we should all meet again at Sidcot.

Molly's own article for the 1979 O.S. Report, entitled "After 50 years", sketched so vividly the Sidcot days of our time and her reactions to it. Perhaps I can briefly add a few more recollections of joint activities: Select Choir practices for the Sunday Evening Anthem; hours of rehearsals under Maurice Littleboy's direction for the production of "St. Joan" to celebrate the opening of the New Hall and Meeting House in 1926; hilarious excursions by coach to play "away matches" of hockey and tennis. Many more pictures come back, but space forbids. From The Mount School, Molly went to Newnham College, Cambridge and graduated in English and History. During her final year she made her first contact with the Rhythmic Gymnastic Movement, and being both athletic and musical, she decided to go to Germany to train under Dr. Medau in Berlin. On her return she gained teaching experience with classes for housewives in Dagenham, but soon felt the need to widen her horizons. So she travelled to the Far East, teaching in Japan, until shortly before the War she returned home. Finally, with the encouragement, among others, of her uncle Philip Noel Baker [see below], and the enthusiastic help of her parents, Jack and Nettie (née Baker, Sidcot 1894-95), the "Medau Society of Great Britain" was formally inaugurated in 1952, with Molly as President and the Braithwaite home at Ferniehurst, Hampstead Way, the first Medau Centre in this country. During the next few years, the work of the Society became officially recognised by the Ministry of Education and the Council of Physical Education, and in 1967 Molly acquired for the Society a large Victorian house in Balham where there were rooms for classes and recreation. Molly, now increasingly handicapped by arthritis, lived in a charming flat at the top of the house. The Medau Movement was initially recreational, but by now there were classes for the Elderly, for the Disabled, for psychiatric patients and others. It was very much Molly's energy and total dedication that attracted teachers and members to form groups all over Britain. She published an account of the development of the Movement in 1955 and brought it up to date in 1976.

The crowning glory of her professional career came with the Festival of Movement in the Royal Albert Hall in April 1978 when hundreds of people took part, as teams, in a wonderful display of rhythmic movement and colour. Molly, in front of the "mike" introduced them all with her usual clarity and grace. It was fitting that a few months later she was honoured with the M.B.E. To those of us who knew her well at Sidcot it was a great joy that she was able to return for our Class Reunion at Easter 1979 and to know how much she was looking forward to being at Sidcot more often. But this was not to be, Molly died in her brother Franklin's (Sidcot 1929-32) home on January 19th, 1981. Many members of her family and friends, including Old Scholars, attended the simple service of thanks-giving for her life, friendship and devoted service for others.

Notes for Philip John BAKER:

The son of Canadian-born Quakers, Baker added his wife's surname, Noel, to his own about 1926. His mistress was for many years Lady Megan Lloyd-George, the daughter of Lloyd George. He studied at Haverford College in Pennsylvania, at King's College, Cambridge, and at the Universities of Munich and Paris.

A noted athlete, he ran in the 1912 and 1920 Olympic Games, and as captain of the British team at the 1920 Games in Antwerp he won the silver medal in the 1,500 metres. He also competed in the 1924 Olympics at Paris, (captain of British track team which inspired the film "Chariots of Fire") and the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam. As a Quaker, Noel-Baker could not enlist in World War I but served with bravery in an ambulance unit and received several medals. From 1924 to 1929 he was professor for International Relations at London University. British statesman and advocate of international disarmament, who received the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1959. Fluent in seven languages, he campaigned widely for 40 years for peace through multilateral disarmament. A member of the British delegation to the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, Baker (as he then was) subsequently joined the League of Nations secretariat. He assisted Fridtjof Nansen, the Norwegian explorer and humanitarian who received the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1922. At the League of Nations assembly in 1923-24, Baker served as personal assistant to Lord Robert Cecil (later Viscount Cecil of Chelwood), promoter of the League and recipient of the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1937. He also was principal assistant to Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference at Geneva, in 1932-33.

Noel-Baker sat in the House of Commons as a Labour member from 1929 to 1931 for Coventry and from 1936 to 1970 for Derby South. Between 1945 and 1961, he was successively minister of state, secretary of state for air and for Commonwealth relations, and minister of fuel and power. He helped to draft the UN charter and was a member of the British delegation to the General Assembly in 1946-47.

From 1960 to 1982 he was president of the International Council on Sport and Physical Recreation of UNESCO. His survey of the disarmament problem was published as The Arms Race: A Programme for World Disarmament (1958). Other works include Disarmament and The League of Nations at Work, both published in 1926, and The Arms Race (1960), for which Noel-Baker was awarded the Albert Schweitzer Prize in 1960. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for campaign for disarmament in 1959. A retrospective study, The First World Disarmament Conference, 1932-33, and Why It Failed, was published in 1979. Noel-Baker was made a life peer in 1977 as Lord Noel-Baker and spent his retirement working for the cause of world disarmament. In 1981, at the age of 91, he wrote and recorded a popular song on the subject. Slide picture with Patrick & Thomas O'B Baker at Friends House, London 1979.

The Right Honorable Philip John Noel-Baker (November 1, 1889-1982) is a man of strong and steadfast convictions. To a reporter who interviewed him after the Norwegian Nobel Committee announced that he had been awarded the Peace Prize, he said, «War is a damnable, filthy thing and has destroyed civilization after civilization - that is the essence of my belief.»<sup>1</sup>

Noel-Baker, who formally joined his wife's surname with his own in 1943, was reared in an atmosphere of affluence, religious observance, and political activism. He was one of seven children of a Canadian-born Quaker, Joseph Allen Baker, who moved to England to establish what became a profitable machine manufacturing firm. The elder Baker was a pacifist and humanitarian who held a seat on the London County Council from 1895 to 1907 and in the House of Commons from 1905 to 1918.

Noel-Baker excelled in school. After attending Bootham School in York and Haverford College in Pennsylvania - both of them Quaker-affiliated institutions - he took honors in the history tripos in 1910 and in the economics tripos in 1912 at King's College, Cambridge, and in both 1911 and 1913 was named the Whewell scholar in international law. Before the First World War he also studied for a brief time in Paris and Munich. At Cambridge in 1912, Noel-Baker was president of the debating society and from 1910 to 1912 president of the Cambridge University Athletic Club. A stellar performer in the middle distances, he ran in the Olympic Games held in Stockholm in 1912 and captained the British track team at the 1920 Olympics in Antwerp and at the 1924 Games in Paris.

From 1914 until the present day, Noel-Baker has three times accepted academic posts but has left them to pursue a career in public service. Having completed his M.A., he accepted the post of vice-principal of Ruskin College at Oxford in 1914, but with the onset of the war, he organized and became the commandant of the Friends' Ambulance Unit attached to the fighting front in France (1914-1915) and subsequently became adjutant of the First British Ambulance Unit for Italy (1915-1918). In France he won the Mons Star (1915); in Italy, the Silver Medal for Military Valor (1917) and the Croce di Guerra (1918). In 1915 he met and married a field hospital nurse, Irene Noel, the daughter of a British landowner in Achmetaga, Greece.

Noel-Baker participated in the formation, the administration, and the legislative deliberations of the two great international political organizations of the twentieth century - the League of Nations and the United Nations. In 1918-1919, during the Peace Conference in Paris, he was principal assistant to Lord Robert Cecil on the committee which drafted the League of Nations Covenant; from 1920 to 1922 a member of the Secretariat of the League, being principal assistant to Sir Eric Drummond, first secretary-general of the League; from 1922 to 1924 the private secretary to the British representative on the League's Council and Assembly. Meanwhile, he also was acting as a valued adviser to Fridtjof Nansen in his prisoner-of-war and refugee work. From 1929 to 1931 he was a member of the British delegation to the Assembly of the League and then for a year an assistant to Arthur Henderson, the chairman of the Disarmament Conference.

For a brief period notable for its scholarly productivity, he returned to academic pursuits. He accepted the invitation issued by the University of London to become the first Sir Ernest Cassell Professor of International Law, occupying this chair from 1924 to 1929. Out of his League experience and further research, he wrote and published The Geneva Protocol for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes (1925), The League of Nations at Work (1926), Disarmament (1926), Disarmament and the Coolidge Conference (1927). From his research for a course of lectures in the summer of 1927 at the Academy of International Law at The Hague came Le Statut juridique actuel des dominions britanniques dans le domaine du droit international (1928). Except for a year spent as Dodge Lecturer in 1933-1934 at Yale University, Noel-Baker henceforth devoted his life to politics and international affairs.

For four decades Noel-Baker was prominent in the Labor Party. He was unsuccessful in a 1924 contest for a seat in the House of Commons, but from 1929 to 1931 he sat as a member from Coventry, from 1936 to 1950 as a member from Derby, and from 1950 to 1970 from Derby South. He was elected to the National Executive Committee of the Labor Party in 1937 and in 1946 succeeded Harold Laski as chairman of the party.

From 1936 to 1942, Noel-Baker was in the Opposition in the Commons, but accepted the office of Joint Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of War Transport proffered by Winston Churchill in 1942. In the Attlee government elected in 1945, he was, successively, Minister of State in the Foreign Office (1945-1946), Secretary of State for Air (1946-1947), Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations (1947-1950), and Minister of Fuel and Power (1950-1951). When the Labor Party lost power, Noel-Baker became a member of the «shadow cabinet», was named vice-chairman of the foreign affairs group of the Parliamentary Labor Party in 1961 and its chairman in 1964.

At the close of World War II, the functions which Noel-Baker discharged in connection with the United Nations were analogous to those he performed for the League of Nations a generation earlier. Having been in charge of British preparatory work for the United Nations beginning in 1944, he helped to draft the Charter of the UN at San Francisco the next year and in 1946 was appointed to membership on the British delegation.

In the formative days of the UN, Noel-Baker was concerned with the selection of a site for UN headquarters (he favored Geneva) and with outlining privileges, restrictions, and responsibilities of members of the UN staff - the ground rules, in a sense, of a world civil service. A delegate to the Food and Agriculture Organization at Quebec in 1945, he helped give viability to that imperilled organization by delineating a compromise between pure research programs on the one hand and relief operations on the other. As the United Kingdom delegate to the Economic and Social Council, he called for an action program to abolish poverty in an affluent world. In the General Assembly, he supported regulation of arms traffic, plans for atomic controls, economic aid for refugees and re-institution of the «Nansen passport», the economic unification of the Allied zones in Germany, and wide-ranging plans for economic development and organization in Europe.

In the decade of the fifties, Noel-Baker returned to his studies on disarmament. He had published a long book in 1936, The Private Manufacture of Armaments. In The Arms Race: A Programme for World Disarmament, published in 1958, he summarizes the results of extensive research combined with «personal experiences which began at the Peace Conference in Paris in 1919». This comprehensive, historical, and analytical study won the Albert Schweitzer Book Prize in 1961.

Although his days of active participation in track have long since passed, Noel-Baker retains the lean look of the athlete and an absorption in athletics. He was commandant of the 1952 British Olympic team and in 1960 became president of the International Council of Sport and Physical Recreation of UNESCO.

Noel-Baker has continued to reside in London since the death of his wife in 1956. For about twenty years he had the pleasure of serving in the House of Commons as a colleague of his only child, Francis Noel-Baker.

Noel-Baker died in 1982.

More About Roland Algernon PENROSE:

Occupation: Art Critic & Surrealist

Notes for Lee MILLER:

Lee Miller first entered the world of photography in New York as a model to the great photographers of the day such as Edward Steichen, Hoyningen-Huene and Arnold Genthe. Not only did the photographer Lee Miller appear as the first real person in an ad for menstrual hygiene, she is probably the most important. It happened right before she started her own artistic career, and the series of ads, by causing such a fuss in America, may have helped that career by giving her a reason to go to Europe, in 1929, escaping the U.S.A. for the sophistication of Europe - and American Surrealist painter and photographer Man Ray.

Lee Miller was born on the 23rd April 1907 to Frances and Theodore Miller. Her family came from Poughkeepsie in New York State, where her father was an engineer, inventor and photographer.

In 1925 she went to Paris to attend L'Ecole Medgyes pour la Technique du Théâtre, and there met many members of the artistic fraternity who became lifelong friends. In 1926 she moved back to New York, where she enrolled in the Art Students League and studied theatrical lighting and design.

In 1926 Condé Nast discovered her when he literally saved her from being run over by a car. A portrait of Lee by Georges Lepape appeared on the cover of Vogue magazine in March 1927. As well as being a photographer, she was a model and photographic subject for many of the top photographers of the day; Edward Steicher, Man Ray, Arnold Genthe, George Hoyningen-Huene and Horst P. Horst to name but a few.

In 1929 she sailed for Paris where she stayed for 3 years. At this time she was covering fashion assignments for a Vogue designer and studying art. She needed to record details of Renaissance costume ornaments - rather than use drawings (the usual recording medium) she experimented with photographs. She decided that she wanted to be a professional photographer, went to Man Ray's studio in Paris and declared herself to be his new student. Man Ray said that he didn't take students but they became lovers and lived together for 3 years so she got her studentship after all. Along with Man Ray she accidentally discovered Solarization were they were developing negatives and she turned the light on when something ran across her foot. Man Ray put in the work to develop the process to a reproducible controllable effect.

She opened her own studio in Paris and settled into the Surrealist school of photography. One of her most well known photographs from this time is the exploding hand. A hand reaching for a door handle where the glass of the door is starred and cracked...the hand seems to explode. In 1931 she exhibited at the Group Annuel des Photographs where she met Aziz Eloui Bey.

The Julien Levy Gallery in New York held the first exhibition of her work in early 1932. After 3 years the affair with Man Ray broke up and in mid 1932 she moved back to New York where she set up a studio with her brother Erik. The Julien Levy Gallery held a second exhibition of her work at the end of the year. The work during this time was mainly portraiture and her ongoing work with the fashion industry. She would take the photographs and Erik would work in the darkroom, overseen by Lee.

In 1933 Erik married Mary Frances Rowley (known as Mafy).

In 1934 Lee married Aziz Eloui Bey in New York. They honeymooned at Niagra Falls then moved to Egypt. Her photographs from the early part of her marriage are mainly travelogues as she moved around Egypt and visited overseas, but there were are very few photographs.

In 1936 she seems to have rediscovered her interest in photography.

In 1937 she went to Paris and left her husband behind, although the marriage lasted a further 2 years the end started here. During those 2 years she spent many holidays with Roland Penrose whom she met in Paris, and other older friends: Man Ray, Picasso, Eileen Agar and many others. She left Egypt and her husband in 1939. Roland Penrose met her when she reached England.

Her photography changed and became of a documentary style. She had to give up the well-equipped studio and make do with quite primitive processing conditions.

During 1940 she worked in mostly standard fashion photography for Vogue in London, but she was also photographing the effects of the Blitz around her. These photographs were published in both Great Britain and America as "Grim Glory: Pictures of Britain under Fire".

In 1941 she met the American David E. Scherman, who was a photographer for Life magazine. They travelled and photographed together on several assignments throughout the war. In the winter of 1941/42 she successfully applied for accreditation to the United States War Department as an American correspondent. This accreditation allowed her to go to the front although not to any combat zone. She produced photographs for a second book - "Wrens in Camera".

Life, Look and Fortune magazines were all undergoing major changes at this time. The old days of photographs being used to illustrate a large body of text were giving way to small bodies of text being used to accompany the photograph that told its own story. This was the type of photograph that Lee Miller excelled at.

In 1944 after the D-Day landings she was the only photographer/journalist in town to record the destruction of the old town of St. Mâlo.

She entered Paris on the very day of liberation. She stayed there for several months to help the French Vogue's editor get the magazine back on its feet. She both co-ordinated the efforts of photographers all over Paris and contributed her own images. Her photo-essay on "Pattern of Liberation", which focused on refugees, appeared in January 1945.

She left Paris and followed the US Army over the Colmar plains towards the Rhine. The Rolliflex she was using, and used for all her photography, did not have a telephoto lens, auto-wind or built in light meter. Under pressure every exposure was a master of guess work. To compensate for and guard against malfunction she alternated her shots on two cameras.

She changed her accreditation from the US Army to the US Air Corps because they had priority on getting film out of the War Zone. Although her accreditation changed, she stayed and travelled with the Army.

In the spring of 1945 Miller and Scherman set out for a scheduled link-up of the American and Russian armies on the banks of the Elbe river at Torgau. There were so many journalists covering the meeting that she left to go photographing the small villages nearby where people were panicking and running away from the 'Russian Bear'. From Torgau they followed the route of General Patton towards Munich and stopped at the 6th Armoury Press Camp. They found out that the Rainbow Company of the 45th Division were going to liberate the concentration camp at Dachau the next day. Her pictures from Dachau and Buchenwald (liberated a few days later) form an incredible historical document. They appeared in Vogue under the headline "Believe It". She saw not only the aftermath of the Gas chambers but the reprisals of the freed prisoners against their guards.

The night of 30th April after their first incredible view of the concentration camps, Lee and Dave Scherman billeted in Munich at the Command Post of the 45th Division. It turned out that the house being used was the Munich residence of Adolf Hitler.

Dick Pollard sent them to Berchtesgaden, Austria where the Army was liberating Hitler's mountain retreat. They arrived in time to photograph the chalet in flames.

1944 and 1945 were a busy time for all the War Correspondents. Lee's publications in Vogue were many and varied

In the anticlimax of the armistice she returned to England and her assignments for Vogue, but she did not stay long. After a bitter row with Roland Penrose she returned to Paris. She was both physically and emotionally exhausted at this time. On assignment she travelled to Salzburg for the Opera festival that was part of the 'getting back to normal' process. She reported on the City then went on to Vienna. One of her more heartfelt photographs was taken here in a children's hospital which had no drugs to treat the children. She watched a child die. There was nothing to help as they (Lee, a doctor and a nun) watched the child lose its fight for life.

From Vienna she went to Budapest where she stayed for some weeks covering the plight of deposed aristocrats. In early 1946 she witnessed and photographed the execution of Laszlo Bardossy, the fascist collaborator and Ex-Prime Minister of Hungary.

She travelled all through Eastern Europe taking photographs as she went, but she could not produce the words to go along with the images. Emotionally she was on a downward spiral isolating herself from all her friends and acquaintances. Finally, a telegram from Dave Scherman got her moving. It simply said "GO HOME!". She returned to Paris to collect her things then went on to London. Vogue published The Romanian piece in May 1946. It consisted of 10 photographs and was her last article recounting the journey of her war.

Lee and Roland spent much of 1946 travelling and visiting friends throughout the world. In January 1947 Lee went to St. Moritz, Switzerland to photograph the fashionable people as they returned to their homes. While in St. Moritz she found out that she was pregnant. Aziz Eloui Bey formally divorced Lee and she married Roland in May 1947. Anthony Penrose was born on September 9th 1947.

The Magnum Agency was founded around this time, and she became one of the earliest members.

Lee and Roland found a home, Farley Farm, near the Sussex Downs where they lived when not in London. This home is still in the family today.

Lee and Roland settled into married life. They founded and ran the Institute for Contemporary Art together. Their home became a meeting place for artists and friends. Picasso, Max Ernst, Dorothea Tanning, Leonora Carrington, Man Ray, Paul Eluard, Georges Limbour, Jean Dubuffet, Saul Steinberg, Henry Moore, André Masson all spent many weekends there. Lee's photography took a back seat during this time. Her work for Vogue became less and less important to her as she found other passions that took her time. What photography she did was concentrated on her guests.

In 1949 she wrote about the Institutes for Contemporary Art's exhibition "Forty Thousand Years of Modern Art" for the January Vogue.

In 1951 she wrote about the exhibition for Picasso's birthday for the November Vogue.

1954 saw Lee photographing Picasso for Roland's book "Picasso, his life and work"

In 1955, she took part on the exhibit "The Family of Man" in the Museum of Modern Art in New York and the following World Tour.

In 1966 Roland was knighted for his efforts in support of Contemporary Art in Britain, she became Lady Lee Penrose, and appeared in several magazines.

During the '60s and '70s she took very few photographs. One of her last trips abroad was in 1976 when she accepted the honours for her friend Man Ray at the Arles Photo Festival.

She found out she had Cancer in 1976.

Some of her photographs appeared in the exhibit 'Photographs from the Julien Levy Collection' at the Art Institute of Chicago.

Lee's granddaughter, Amy, was born on 25th April 1977.

Lady Lee Penrose, nee Miller died at home on 27th July 1977.

Lee Miller was the type of photographer that either invested her whole being into her photographs or ignored her photography altogether. There is a wide variety amongst her images. The stark images of the streets of London during the Blitz and the reality of the horrors of Dachau and Buchenwald are timeless in their ability to draw reactions from the viewer. Lee seems to have become unsure of her photographic merit during the last years of her life. She would not allow publication of her images. Most of the work sorting out her accumulated images and negatives has been done by her family after her death.

He was born May 06, 1889 in near Dublin, Ontario CANADA, and died November 30, 1970.

Notes for FREDERIC JEWELL AIKENS:

Some info gleaned written in family Bible by Fred (son of David) on Dec 11, 1952

In 1910, they moved to Brandon, Man. Frederic Jewell Aikens visited his Aunt Eliza Herbert on his way home from a trip to his birthplace in Ontario. His cousin Rossie Herbert had a girl friend by the name of Annie Bardella Brigden. The attraction was sufficient to bring him back to Brandon in the fall of 1911, to attend Brandon College for a course in Commerce. Dell, at the time was working at millinery.

Fred and Dell were married July 31st, 1912, the honeymoon being spent at Winnipeg Beach. From mid August to the end of October they were on the farm helping his father take off the last crop. They visited Jennie Aikens Vipond and Uncle Arthur at Froud, Sask. Christmas was spent in Brandon with Dell's folk, then a move to Port Arthur, Ontario in Jan. 1913.

Fred worked in the carpet department of the I. L. Mathews store until August, 1914, when the 1st World War broke out. He began work with the Prudential Insurance Company in October. Hugh Elliot was born Sept. 11th, 1914. The company moved them to Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan in Sept, 1916, when Audrey Selene was six months old. Fred was to take charge of the office, which was greatly in arrears. He worked very hard and within three years brought it up to a good standing, then his health failed. The doctor suggested a move to the coast, as the high altitude was not suited to his nerve condition. The company again moved them to Vancouver and he resumed work, but the migraine headaches continued. He bought a confectionary store on Georgia Street, but was forced to move when the Medical Dental building was erected.

They spent thirty-two years at 5002 Commercial Drive, Hugh, Audrey, Iola (born 1918) and Bea (born 1920), were all married from there. In April, 1952, Fred, Dell and Bert (born 1930), moved to Yale Street, then in 1953 to 1270 Kelowna Street from where Bert was married in Sept. 1957. Fred worked ten years at the P.N.E. until his health again failed.

The above was taken from the notes compiled by Fred and Dell Aikens as a Centennial Project, in 1967.
