

Descendants of JOHN MULVIHILL

Generation No. 1

1. JOHN¹ MULVIHILL was born Abt. 1808 in Kilpadogue, Parish Kilnaughton, Co Kerry, Ireland, and died Unknown in ??. He married MARY SULLIVAN Abt. 1824. She was born in Doonard, Parish Kilnaughton, Co Kerry, Ireland, and died Unknown in ??.

Notes for JOHN MULVIHILL:

Immigrated in 1852 or earlier into New York City ? with children Mary, Matthew and wife Catrin, John and William ?

Other than Matthew the others seem too old to be children of this John & Mary.

Question ?? Are John and Matthew brothers? No source known for John or Mary's b & d dates

More About JOHN MULVIHILL:

Burial: Unknown, St Bartholmew, Wilmore, Cambria Co, PA

Notes for MARY SULLIVAN:

Source info is not available; I believe cemetery info is mixed between Mulvihill's and Wilmore Mulvehill's; all buried at Wilmore.

Her listed b & d dates are for a Mary Egan Mulvehill !! (1799 1876)

Buried at St Bartholmew, Wilmore, Cambria Co, PA??; old cemetery beside the church.

Immigrated on August 29, 1853 on the ship Tonawanda at Philadelphia.

She most probably died at Dudley/Robertsdale and was later moved to Wilmore; same for her husband John?

4. TIMOTHY² MULVIHILL (*JOHN*¹) was born Apr 1848 in Co Kerry, Ireland, and died 26 Nov 1926 in Mt Vernon, Allegheny Co, PA. He married NORA ENRIGHT 24 Oct 1884 in Pittsburgh, Allegheny Co, PA, daughter of MAURICE ENRIGHT and MARY STACK. She was born 21 Sep 1861 in Co Kerry, Ireland, and died 1937.

Notes for TIMOTHY MULVIHILL:

Census reports of 1870 and 1900 indicate he immigrated in 1870; may have traveled with Honora.

Per CJ's research, Timothy told his grandson John J that he had been on the 'run' for 17 years prior to his immigration. He never did explain why. This probably explains why he immigrated later than the main family; but where was Honora all this time? Her birth date, being so much later than her siblings raises all kind of questions- but no answers.

In 1870 census he is living with John Madigan(b.1808) family in Carbon Twp, Huntington Co, PA

Death certificate lists pneumonia as cause of death after falling and breaking his left leg.

Children of TIMOTHY MULVIHILL and NORA ENRIGHT are:

John M. Mulvihill married his childhood sweetheart, Catherine Nagel.

He went to Denver (left family behind) went into partnership operating a beer hall which was eventually transformed into Elitch Gardens (now an amusement park and gardens) in Denver. He was a self-made millionaire and we have a newspaper article on him.

There are still Mulvihills in Denver that John Joseph Mulvihill Jr visited in the 1970s.

4209 W 38th Ave. Denver, CO 80212

The Crown Jewel Of Highland! Historic A.B. Gurtler/"Elitch" Mansion. Incredible Masonry & Oak Woodwork Details. Giant Rooms. 2 Exquisite Vintage Baths + 2 Remdled. Large Remdled Ktchn. Huge 1/3 Acre Lot. New Roof, Plumb, Elec. Big Ovrstd 2-Car Garage.

This stately home, built in 1904, was designed by renowned architect, Wm. E. Fisher, whose family legacy spanned six decades. Fisher-designed public buildings represent some of the most acclaimed in the area, including Colorado National Bank, South High School, and the Tower of Memories at Crown Hill Cemetery. The Fisher family also designed the homes of some of Colorado's most prominent families; the Boettchers, Van Schaaks, both Governors Hughes and Evans, the Neusteters, the Mullins, and the Phipps.

One of the most memorable events associated with the house occurred on a summer afternoon in 1936 in its rose garden. Denver Post heiress, Helen Bonfils, who had been associated with the historic Theatre at Elitch Gardens from 1934 to 1947 as both actress and Theatre manager, was married at the home to Director George Somnes in a widely publicized society wedding. Jack and Budd Gurtler often talked about the family's tradition of Sunday night "business" dinners that took place around the dining room table for over 40 years, hosting many celebrities such as Elitch Theatre stars Frederic March, Raymond Burr, Edward G. Robinson, Patricia Neal, Grace Kelly, and band leaders who played at the Elitch Trocadero Ballroom like Tommy & Jimmy Dorsey, Stan Kenton, Gene Krupa, and Harry James, just to name a few. Don't you wish these walls could talk!

John Mulvihill, who aquired a struggling Elitch Gardens in 1916 from Mary Elitch to save it from the hands of developers, purchased the home from renowned Denver surgeon, John Lowen, in 1927. Mulvihill owned Elitch Gardens until his death in 1930. In 1924, he hired Arnold Gurtler, a young man from Leadville who was working as the chief window dresser at the prestigious Daniels and Fisher Department Store in downtown Denver, to re-decorate his popular Trocadero Ballroom at the Gardens. Arnold soon married John's only daughter, Marie, and the young couple moved into the home with their parents. Arnold owned Elitch Gardens until the early 60's when he turned the park over to his 2 sons, Jack and Budd. The Arnold Gurtler family lived in the house until 1969.

Since the exodus of the Gurtler Family, the home has had its highs and lows. The residence traded hands several times over the next 40 years, going through a brief period of incomplete restoration/renovation in the early 1980's into a final deep decline and abandonment in 2003.

I purchased the home on December 15, 2003. It was devoid of nearly every light fixture, save a couple of cheap pieces of track lighting. There were holes punched in many walls, and the only system that worked was a portion of the electricity. The 100 year old front porch had fallen prey to the poor quality roof that had been installed over it, and crumbled with every snow melt and rain storm. The failing main roof had four layers of heavy material and was starting to sag under the weight, with no gutters. The garage roof allowed water to pour in from a gaping hole left by a small garage fire. All of the upstairs door hardware was missing, including the set that held the upper deck doors closed. With those doors wide open, squirrels and pigeons shared habitation with human squatters. The home had not, of course, been winterized before abandonment. Therefore, the plumbing had frozen and split along with ten out of the fifteen heat radiators mounted throughout the premises. Without a working kitchen, or bath, or heat, it took three months to bring the house to a point where it could be lived in with any level of comfort. In case you were wondering, yes, I do look back at the before pictures and wonder what-the-heck I was thinking.

Flowerbed displaying the "Not to See Elitch's is Not to See Denver" slogan, c. 1916-1920. In 1916, the park was sold to John Mulvihill, with a provision stating the name could never be changed. New attractions appeared, including the fabulous Trocadero Ballroom in 1917, and two Philadelphia Toboggan Company creations: the Wildcat roller coaster — designed by Herbert Paul Schmeck — in 1922 and a new carousel in 1928. This carousel is still operational at Six Flags Elitch Gardens. It was during this time the park's enduring slogan was first popularized: "Not to See Elitch's is Not to See Denver."

As floral gardens were expanded and greenhouses built, Elitch's became a commercial florist. Mulvihill died in 1930 and the park's ownership transferred to his son-in-law Arnold Gurtler.

In the mid 1930s, the zoo portion of the park was discontinued, with the space being used for more formal gardens (and rides). A giant floral clock was added and the Trocadero Ballroom became a regular stop for touring big bands and home to An Evening at the Troc, a weekly radio broadcast. During this classic period of Big Band Jazz and Swing, the Trocadero Ballroom became a famous summertime night spot as its seemingly endless succession of brilliant stars provided countless hours of live national radio broadcasts in an age before television.

In 1945, management was assumed by Gurtler's sons, Jack and Budd. In 1952, a section of the park called Kiddieland, oriented to small children, was opened. At a time when amusement parks catered almost exclusively to adults, Elitch's Kiddieland was an instant hit attraction with the first of many lucky generations of small fry. Lots of fun stuff for tots, like 2-seat rocket planes, open-wheel race cars, real floating "motorboats", a real small-scale car track with gas station, all in Kid Scale. The floral business side of the park was quite successful, becoming the largest supplier of carnations in the country in the early 1950s.

Despite substantial community outcry, the Trocadero Ballroom was torn down by the Gurtlers in 1975, claiming the declining popularity of ballroom dancing, replacing Denver's beloved landmark Old Troc with Skee-Ball and arcade games. The theater, which had switched formats from summer stock to star-centered performances in 1963, closed in 1991.
