15. TREVOR OWEN⁴ CALE (JOHN GEORGE³, WILLIAM², JOHN¹) was born 09 Jan 1890 in Coed-y-brain, Gwehelog, Monmouthshire, and died 08 Apr 1960 in Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada. He married GERTRUDE ELIZABETH JENKINS 09 Jan 1919 in Llansoy, Monmouthshire. She was born 02 Aug 1898 in Gwernesney, Monmouthshire, and died 25 Sep 1984 in Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada.

Notes for TREVOR OWEN CALE:

The following information about Trevor Owen Cale was kindly provided by his granddaughter Judy Harper.

Trevor Owen and his brother Albert Edgar came to Canada in about 1909 or early 1910, to be labourers on wheat farms. They worked near Weyburn, Saskatchewan. When WW I broke out, they joined the Canadian army, which was called the Canadian Expeditionary Force or CEF for that war. Albert Edgar enlisted at Regina in 1915, and returned to Wales at war's end.

Trevor was proud all of his life of the fact that he boarded a special train sent across Canada in late Aug or early Sep 1914 to gather up volunteers and to take them to Valcartier Quebec, where the first contingent of the CEF was sworn in, given uniforms and assigned numbers, then put into troop ships and taken to England. They spent the winter training but went to France the next year, and were replacements for British troops when the fighting in France was at its worst.

I don't know exactly when or where, but during the war, Trevor was affected by mustard gas and was returned to England for recuperation. He was operated on, and a lung was removed. That made him susceptible to colds and pneumonia all his life. Evidently, he was allowed to leave the military environment periodically because he spent some time in Llansoy during the war. At war's end, he was given his choice of where to leave the army, and he chose England, making his way back to Llansoy. He married Gertrude Jenkins (the girl on the next farm), went to work on one of the several farms his father then owned and together they had four children.

In 1929, he decided to take up an offer made to all soldiers in the CEF by the Canadian Government, and that was the opportunity to homestead, that is, to farm land assigned to him by the government, land which had never been farmed before. If he was successful in establishing a home and some fields under cultivation, the land would have been given to him. He and Gertrude and the four children sailed across the ocean to Quebec City, then took the train. The land he attempted to homestead was south of Weyburn, land that became part of the badlands when the drought of the 1930s hit along with the Great Depression. He lost the land. He and the family moved into Weyburn, where he was lucky enough to obtain employment and so survived the Depression.

In 1936, with the death of his father, he chose to return to Wales with his wife and four children. He was considering the possibility of staying in Wales permanently, but after six months he decided to return to Canada, back to Weyburn. A fifth child, a son, was born in 1938 in Canada.

Their eldest daughter married and moved to Lethbridge where her husband's family were in farming. They too had a farm, growing sugar beets. Trevor and Gertrude, with the youngest son, also moved to Lethbridge. The eldest daughter, Gertrude Olive and her husband, have both died, as have Trevor and Gertrude.

My mother, Doris Catherine, is still living. She joined the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service in 1942, and served in Halifax, St John's Newfoundland, and Sydney, Nova Scotia. She met my father, who was also in the navy, and in 1946, they married. My father stayed in the navy, but ended his career in Ottawa, where I live. I am the eldest, and have two brothers and one sister.

One of Trevor's sons, Lloyd, went to Edmonton to work in the aircraft industry, and to this day still lives in a small town outside of Edmonton. He is married and has a son and a daughter.

Another of Trevor's sons, Arthur, joined the navy in the Second World War, but did not get past Toronto in his naval service. He remained in Toronto after leaving the navy, married, and had three children. Both the son and his wife are now dead. The last child, a son, stayed in Lethbridge, working in a local industry. He married and had five sons and a daughter. He and his wife are still living.
