Generation No. 1

1. ADAM<sup>1</sup> GLATTFELDER was born 1547 in Glattfelden, Zürich, Switzerland, and died in Glattfelden, Zürich, Switzerland. He married VERENA SIGI July 29, 1570 in Glattfelden, Zürich, Switzerland. She was born Abt. 1549 in Glattfelden, Zürich, Switzerland.

Notes for ADAM GLATTFELDER:

Although attempts have been made to trace the Glattfelder family far back into the Middle Ages, one should not expect to find much, if any, reliable evidence of its existence until people began taking family names and until, much later than that, keeping parish records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths became common. Few, if any, such records were kept until the Protestant Reformation occurred in the sixteenth century, when first the Protestants and later the Catholics began the practice.

In a letter which he wrote to Samuel F. Glatfelter (1858-1927) in York, Pennsylvania, in 1906, Emil Glattfelder (1876-1941), a Zurich schoolmaster, reported on the findings of his careful search of the Swiss Reformed records of the parish of Glattfelden. The information concerning Hans Peter's forbears which follows is taken from the data which he sent to York. It preserves his spelling of names and assumes that the number of children in the families on which he reported was the same as the number whose baptisms he found in the records.

The first reliable evidence of the Glattfelder family which Professor Emil located was the marriage on July 29, 1570 of Adam Glattfelder and Verena Sigi (not Legi, as most accounts have it). It is probable that this couple were the great-great-great grandparents of Casper, the emigrant to America. A man who was probably their son, Hans, identified in the parish records as a cooper, or maker of barrels, married Margret Bernhart on November 28, 1596. Professor Emil could not be certain of the relationship between Adam and Hans because the Glattfelden baptismal records do not begin until 1577.

Hans and Margret Glattfelder, great-great-grandparents of Hans Peter, had four children, born between 1597 and 1606. The oldest, Joachim, married Anna Foster (d.1657). He was the first of at least three generations in his family to be identified in the church records as deacon. Joachim and Anna were the great grandparents of Hans Peter. They had three children, born between 1626 and 1637. Their second son, Felix (1632-1709), married Barbara Glattfelder (d.1694) on November 30 (Professor Emil wrote 31), 1662. The blood relationship between Felix and Barbara is not known, but it does illustrate the fact that there were then several branches of the Glattfelder family in the Glattfelden community.

Felix and Barbara were the grandparents of Hans Peter. They had four children: Elisabetha (d.1664), Hans (c.1667-1734), Felix (1669-1724), and Hans Heinrich (1671-1734). Hans married Dorothea Gorius; they were the forbears of Professor Emil. Felix married Barbara Gorius on January 22, 1695. Felix and Barbara (Gorius) Glattfelder were the parents of Casper. They had eight children: Elisabetha (1698), Hans Peter (1700-1742), Felix (1702-1702), Felix (1704-1705), Barbara (1706), Anna Margaretha (1708-1708), Kaspar (1709), and Hans Georg (1711-1714). At least four of these children died in infancy. Hans Peter and Kaspar were the only sons to reach adulthood. As were his father and grandfather before him, this Felix is identified in the parish records as a deacon.

Casper (brother of Hans Peter) Glattfelder (1709-1775), to use the more common later spelling of his first name, was baptized on July 25, 1709. We do not know the exact date of his birth. He attended the parish schools and, as far as we know, became a small farmer. On April 3, 1731 he married Elisabetha Laufer (this is the way her family name was spelled, with one f, in the parish record). Before leaving Switzerland, this couple had seven children.

Generation No. 6

Notes for HANS PETER GLATTFELDER:

The REINAU family settled in the West Manchester area of York County, Penn. Jacob grew up in that area and on 18 Nov 1750, at age 24 married Lisabeth (Elizabeth) GLATTFELDER, born 1729 in Glattfelden, Zurich, Switzerland, daughter of Johan Peter GLATTFELDER and Salomae AMBERG. They settled on a 50 acre plot of land south of York village near her uncle, Casper Glattfelder, who had brought his deceased brother's family to America along with his own family. Hans (or John) Peter died in 1742 before crossing the Swiss boarder. (<http://home.earthlink.net/~telem/>)

Notes from Emil Glattfelder research concerning Casper, brother of Hans Peter:

We simply do not know why Casper and Elizabeth

Glattfelder decided to leave their old homes or how long it took them to make up their minds to go. Probably both of them were influenced by the same conviction which motivated most other eighteenth-century Germans and Swiss to emigrate: the belief that sooner or later things would be better for them and their children in the New World. They may have caught what some contemporaries called the emigration fever from others who had already made up their minds and departed. There is a family tradition that Elizabeth was ready and willing to go because she did not want her sons conscripted some day and sent, as were many thousands of other Swiss in the eighteenth century, as mercenary soldiers to foreign lands.

So many persons left certain parts of Switzerland, especially in the 1730s and 1740s, that a number of cantonal governments, fearing depopulation, issued decrees intended to discourage further emigration and imposing penalties both on those leaving and on the purchasers of the property they were trying to sell. In 1744 the government of the canton of Zurich requested the pastors of each parish to list the names and ages of each person who during the preceding decade had left for Pennsylvania or the Carolinas. The pastoral reports which have survived list 2,300 emigrants from this one canton between 1734 and 1744. A total of 53 persons left the parish of Glattfelden during this decade.

In the spring of 1743, a year before the pastor submitted his report, six families from Glattfelden prepared to cut themselves loose from the world they knew so well in favor of one three thousand miles away, about which they knew next to nothing. One of these families consisted of Casper, Elizabeth, their four surviving children (Margaret, Solomon, Anna, and John), and Hans Jacob Lauffer, Elizabeth's seventy-year old father. With them were Elizabeth's sister, Dorothy, and her husband, Henry Walter (1713-1781). Also in the company were the widow and six children of Casper's elder brother, Hans (or John) Peter Glattfelder (1700-1742), who had started for America a year earlier but died before crossing the Swiss border. His family, and any others who might have been with them, had then returned to Glattfelden with his body.

Although the Glattfelden pastor undoubtedly had the parish register close at hand while he was preparing his report of emigrants in 1744, he appears not to have consulted it, at least not carefully. He assigned erroneous ages to the Glattfelders. For example, Casper was not thirty-six years old in 1743, Solomon was not nine, and baby John was not seven. Also, he listed John Peter as being among those leaving in 1743, when in fact the parish register gives his date of death as April 21,

The six families of Glattfelden made their way down the Rhine river to Rotterdam, where they boarded the ship Francis and Elizabeth for the perilous ocean crossing. After a voyage which customarily took between seven and twelve weeks they reached Philadelphia in August 1743. Provincial regulations in force since 1727 required that entering foreign males sixteen years and older take an oath of allegiance to the King of Great Britain and one of fidelity to the proprietors of Pennsylvania. Among those who took the oath on August 30, 1743 were the five male heads of families who had left Glattfelden together, including "Gasper Gladfelter." He was described in the records as being sick on this day. Since his father-in-law is not on record as having taken the oath, we can assume that, like many others who attempted it, Hans Jacob Lauffer had died during the long ocean crossing. As we shall see, other members of the party may also have died on the way.

Notes for JOHN C. CLODFELTER, SR.:

Notes for JOHN CLODFELTER:

Let us take ourselves, then, to Abbott's Creek in North Carolina to the home of John Clodfelter. It was the summer of 1830 and a letter had been received from two families, former neighbors, who had moved to far away Indiana the previous year. The letter described their location as west of Indianapolis near Portland Mills on Raccoon Creek [now in Putnam county]. It was a likely place with fertile soil and suitable climate for agriculture. The women of the family need not fear Indians or wild animals as neither Had been of any trouble. So the John Clodfelter family and the family of Mrs. Clodfelter's brother, the Bowers family, soon started by covered wagon up through the Shenandoah Valley until they finally struck the Cumberland Trail which has now become National Highway No. 40. Just how many weeks were required for this trip we do not know. Our grandfather, Solomon Clodfelter, was at that time twenty-three years old, and as the oldest son of the family it became his duty to ride the lead horse of a team of three horses which were hitched to the covered wagon. His father, John, walked most of the time and drove the extra stock that was being taken along with them. At the end of two or three months they reached the small village of Indianapolis and inquired the way to Portland Mills. They were informed that Portland Mills was a thriving town about fifty miles farther west with a good grist mill, a tannery, and stores where salt, calico and other necessary supplies could be bought. Goods were brought up Big Raccoon Creek on flat boats from trading posts along the Wabash River. So the weary travelers must have felt their new home was near and hurried a bit more at this news!

They came on down the trail to Putnamville (a stop on the stage route where that all important letter had been mailed to them in the spring) turned north to Greencastle, continued northwest through what is now Morton, until they reached Raccoon Creek. By this time they were in the right vicinity and started looking for a place where they could live. After crossing the stream near the site of the present covered bridge, they found a cabin a short distance to the north which was not in use. It was here that they spent their first night as Indiana settlers, and this cabin became the family home until a permanent one could be established. John Clodfelter later entered eighty acres of land, which laid just north of the cabin, and there another house was built which we all know and shall refer to as the Old Home Place. That winter without doubt must have been a strenuous one for the entire family with all of the duties of establishing a home and getting a living for a family of eleven out of a wilderness. We recall that history tells us the winter of 1830 was one of the coldest with fiercest blizzards ever known.

They all seemed to withstand the ordeals except the father [John]. He became very ill with a deep cold late in the winter and never regained his health. He passed away August 19, 1831. The mother, Katherine Clodfelter [Catherine], took up the burden of maintaining the home for her family, and did so with the help of her older sons. She spent the rest of her life at this home place and did not pass away until 1856. John Clodfelter was buried on the Jesse Fordyce farm in Russell Township, evidently a place where one of the first cemeteries was started but was not continued. John's wife was buried in the Sutherlin cemetery, which is an old graveyard but has always been well kept.

The United Brethren Church.

The first organization of this church was made in the Clodfelter neighborhood, about four miles southeast of Albia, in 1854. In 1845, however, Rev. Wm. Bird, an evangelist, preached occasionally near Hayden Smith's, south of Albia a couple of miles, where John Collins now resides. Rev. Kohzad preached in 1855, and the next year Rev. McLaughlin. In 1858 Rev. Byerley took charge of the congregation. He was succeeded by Rev. Jacob Bonebrake.

She was born November 09, 1906 in Nickerville, PA, and died May 18, 1989 in The Dalles, OR.

Notes for DONALD LEMLEY CLODFELTER:

Donald moved with his parents to Wasco, OR from Monmouth in 1902 and graduated from high school there in 1917. In 1923 he received his bachelor of science degree in pharmacy from then Oregon State College. After practicing pharmacy for several years in Portland (Owl Pharmacy) he took over his father's ranch (the former Buckley Ranch southwest of Grass Valley) in 1927. Ethel was a school teacher at the Michigan school (between the ranch and Grass Valley) and met Donald at a local dance. They were married before the end of the school year and had to keep the marriage quiet since young women teachers were not allowed to get married while they were employed as teachers. They were married in Tacoma, Washington.
