Generation No. 1

1. ROBERTUS<sup>1</sup> OKEDEN was born Abt. 1433 in Nutley, Hampshire, England (Source: Web Page of Calvin Lee Ingram and Family, "Electronic." at <http://www.familytreemaker.com/plweb-cgi/fastweb?getdoc+view1+ftousers+109822+28+wAAA+%28%26Okeden%26%29>). He married JOAN.

Notes for ROBERTUS OKEDEN:

According to Van Alstyne, the first record of Robert appears in the year 1453 when he appears as a witness to a grant of land in Nutley, Hampshire, England. He again appears in 1457 in connection with a post mortem search of the land in Nutley belonging to Joan Ogden of Ellingham County, Southants. Because it was customary for the nearest relative to settle the estate of deceased persons, and the two sons being named, it is fair to assume that Joan was his wife.

Graduated from MIT in early 1900s

A major renovation of the late 1960's was made possible by the generosity of James Madison Barker, Class of 1907, a distinguished alumnus and civil engineer who taught at MIT for seven years and later entered the business world. He was a member of the MIT Corporation for almost 40 years, being its oldest active member when he died in 1974 at age 88. Barker was an early leader in the field of international business who spoke eight languages, and had a lifelong interest in libraries and museums.

William James Rankin remembers Larry being killed by kamikaze.

"The Matthew P. Deady had just arrived at Tacloban on 3 November when several Japanese raiders bombed and strafed the shipping. Gunners on the Juan Cabrio knocked down a plane headed directly for their ship, but it burst into flames and crashed into the Deady, killing four of the Armed Guard. Twenty-two soldiers were killed when the exploding plane set off a load of liquid acetylene. Arthur F. Maxam, an ordinary seaman on the Deady, received the Merchant Marine Meritorious Service Medal for heroic action in leading a group of volunteers into a blazing hold full of carbide and other inflammable cargo, an action that probably saved their ship. On 12 November another suicide plane missed the Deady and splashed into the bay nearby. Three more kamikazes were splashed by that ship, which claimed a total of six planes killed during 44 raids at Tacloban." from <http://www.armed-guard.com/ag78.html>

3 November, Fri. --

Pacific

Japanese aircraft attack air facilities on Saipan and Tinian as part of a series of strikes on this area from which heavy bombing missions against their home islands are launched.

Japanese planes raid U.S. shipping and airfield facilities at Tacloban, Leyte; U.S. freighter Matthew P. Deady is crashed by kamikaze that is engaged with intense antiaircraft fire from the Armed Guard; the explosion of the crashing suicide plane starts a fire in the cargo that threatens the ship. Although firefighting efforts are successful, two Armed Guard sailors (of the 27-man detachment) and 26 troops (of the 300 on board) perish in the attack.

A ship that accompanied the Deady was the Zaurak; this account gives a feeling for the time and place:

For the next two months, Zaurak made a series of voyages between various islands in the Southwestern Pacific, visiting several of the Solomon Islands, New Guinea, Emirau, Manus, and New Caledonia. On 23 October, she departed Bougainville in the Solomons with a convoy of 31 ships bound for the Philippines with reinforcements and supplies for the forces that had just invaded Leyte. She steamed into Leyte Gulf at the head of the convoy on 29 October and anchored in San Pedro Bay.

During her 11 days there, Zaurak received her baptism of fire. Initially, conditions in the San Pedro Bay anchorage were quiet enough; but, when she moved to the San Juanico Strait anchorage on the 31st, enemy air activity—occasioned by the proximity of Tacloban airfield—rose markedly. On 1 and 2 November, she fired her first shots at enemy planes attacking the airstrip ashore but, due to darkness and extreme range, scored no hits. On the 3d and 4th, Japanese began attacking the ships in the anchorage as secondary targets.

The ship claimed her first enemy plane on the latter morning when a plane attacking the airfield veered out of a searchlight beam and away from shore-based antiaircraft fire to attack the ships in the anchorage. Zaurak's secondary battery opened fire, but the plane flew right through her field of fire to crash into SS Matthew P. Deady in the vicinity of that merchant ship's number 1 hatch. Almost immediately, volunteers from Zaurak went to the stricken merchantman's aid, rescuing over 20 men from the water around the blazing ship. A little later that same morning, another Japanese plane ran afoul of Zaurak's guns and fell in flames into the water. Soon thereafter, two more intruders approached the ship but never came close enough to become a good target. Though she claimed hits on both, neither plane went down.

During her final five days at Leyte, she experienced several more air attacks, but her guns downed no more planes. On 8 November, the ship had to get underway to ride out a heavy tropical storm which approached in typhoon force. The following day, Zaurak embarked passengers and departed Leyte Gulf in a convoy of 20 ships, bound for Hollandia, New Guinea.
