

Descendants of Unknown Battee

Generation No. 1

1. UNKNOWN¹ BATTEE

Notes for UNKNOWN BATTEE:

I'm going to use this line to place unknown Battee's that I've found in my research and can not place them in the right family line!!

Children of UNKNOWN BATTEE are:

 - i. FARDINANDO² BATTEE, b. Abt. 1630; d. Abt. Jun 1705, Anne Arundel, MD.
 - ii. JOHN BATTEE, b. Of St. James Parish Anne Arundel, MD; d. Bef. Jan 30, 1708/09, Anne Arundel Co, MD; m. SARAH NEALE, Aft. 1693, Anne Arundel, MD; b. Abt. 1670, Charles Co., MD; d. Apr 11, 1752, Anne Arundel Co, MD.

Notes for JOHN BATTEE:

Found this John in "St. James Old Herring Creeke Parish, Anne Arundel County, Maryland 1663 - 1799" by Edith Stansbury Dallam.

This appears to be the John that married the widow Sarah Bishop. Although some accounts show John Battee and Sarah Bishop having children: Mary, Elizabeth and Rebecca, which he mentions as daughters in his will dated 30 Jan 1709, they actually appear to be Roger Bishop's daughters per his will below dated 27th June, 1693.

This John is too old to be the son of Fardanindo d. 1705, his son John is supposed to have been born ca. 1698 or the date of birth of John son of Fardanindo is wrong.

BATTEE

FERNANDO BATTEE, was a resident of South River, Md., and Judge of the County Court (justice) for Anne Arundel County, 1683 to 1694; also Commissioner.¹⁴ He married Elizabeth, daughter of Colonel Thomas Hood. Their daughter Dinah married John Brewer III.

<http://www.timelesstreasure.net/Ferdinando%20Battee.htm>

Ferdinando Battee was born about 1630 in England. From various records, it appears that he first came to Virginia, then to Maryland several years later. He was married to Millicent and their children were Dinah, born about 1654, Seaborne, born about 1663, and possibly another daughter, Millicent.

After the death of his wife, Millicent, he remarried Elizabeth. He was much older than Elizabeth, possibly as much as 30 years. They had a daughter, named Dinah, as well. This was very unusual, since the elder daughter Dinah was still alive. Ferdinando and Elizabeth's daughter Dinah married John Brewer, III. Reference has been made to Ferdinando trying to be like the biblical patriarchs that had large families in their older years. He died in 1705, All Hallows, Maryland.

ancestor, and REBECCA MARSHALL was my own grandmother who lived in Marshall Hall. I am her namesake, and oldest surviving grandchild in Georgia or Maryland, and she died before I was born. And I am now (1916) a little more than eighty one years old".

In a perfect line from Captain Randolph Brandt, we come from his daughter MARY BRANDT, who came to Maryland in 1660, and in a perfect line we trace back to BARBARA MARSHALL, who married RANDOLPH
HANSON, the daughter of WILLIAM MARSHALL, who was born nearly four hundred years ago.

AND NOW FOR THE MARSHALLS: On page 309, Maryland Calendar of Wills, land office in Annapolis, you will find a WILLIAM MARSHALL gave his daughter, Barbara, a two-hundred acre tract of land lying on the Potomac River. She married RANDOLPH HANSON, and this doubtless led to the naming of Marshall Hall. The ownership remained in the Marshall Family for at least two hundred years. The old Marshall cemetery has only Marshall graves.

This Marshall Hall was the property of another William Marshall at the time of his death in 1793. He married SUSAN M. WHITTIER, and their daughter, REBECCA MARSHALL, inherited the homestead in 1792. Rebecca married WILLIAM LATIMER. She sold the property to her brother WILLIAM MARSHALL in 1803 and removed her family to Georgia 1806-1807. William Marshall was a Revolutionary soldier and signed the Oath of Allegiance.

MAJOR JOHN MARSHALL, brother of William, was a signer and distinguished officer in the Revolutionary War. Major John Marshall later became Chief Justice of the United States. He left a valuable sword, costing fifty pounds, to his grandson, JOHN MARSHALL CLAGETT. Chief Justice Marshall died in Philadelphia in 1835, and history states that his son, THOMAS MARSHALL, travelling to his father's bedside was struck and killed by a falling brick in Baltimore.

THOMAS MARSHALL, son of WILLIAM MARSHALL II, and wife ELIZABETH (HANSON) b. 1694, d.

ROADS IN ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY, 1703-1765: Part I

by Pat Melville

Citizens of Lyons Creek Hundred in March 1702/03 petitioned for restoration of the original route of the road from Lyons Creek Bridge to the main road at the plantation of John Batty. Abraham Birkhead had laid it out eight to ten years earlier, and, since then, Richard Harrison had changed the part that went through his plantation. The court approved the request. Fourteen years later, Mrs. Elizabeth Battie wanted to include part of the roadway in a cornfield. The justices ordered a route change.

ROADS IN ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY, 1703-1765: Part II

by Pat Melville

Sometimes the county court found ways to recover the costs of road construction. In March 1703/04, the justices ordered the overseer to sell the dead trees along the main road from John Batty's to Pig Point. His instructions included a directive to clear a road through the plantations of Solomon Sparrow and Samuel Lane, avoiding branches and gullies as much as possible.

BREWER

JOHN BREWER I., of Brewerton, Annapolis, Md. (or Bruere, as it was written in Wales, and for several generations in this country), was born in the south of Wales early in the seventeenth century, and died 1667,9 survived by his wife and three children. He emigrated to Massachusetts, but settled in Virginia, 1645, going to Maryland with the Puritan Colony, 1649, which settled on the present site of Annapolis, naming the town Providence.

In 1659 he patented "Brewerton," South River, Md., and there built a brick residence still in possession of the family. This plantation, with other adjacent farms, contained nearly three thousand acres; he was also an owner of six hundred and forty acres on Wye River, Talbot County, Md. He was one of the few men of that period who adhered to the law of primogeniture, and left a large landed estate in entail. He was one of the first Justices of Anne Arundel County Court, appointed July 12, 1658, by Leonard Calvert, and with Samuel Chew represented the county in the House of Burgesses, April 16, 1661.10 He married Elizabeth, whose surname is believed to have been Heathcote. She died in 1667, and in her will she names Rachel, John, and William.

Their son, John Brewer II., died in 1690. He married Sarah, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Warner) Ridgely.

Their son, John Brewer III., married February 14, 1704, Dinah, daughter of Fernando and Elizabeth (Hood) Battee; she was born in 1690.

Their son, John Brewer IV., married Eleanor, daughter of Captain William and Sarah (Westall) Maccubbin.

REVEREND LEWIS RICHARDS' MARRIAGE RECORDS. 1784-1790

MARY K. MEYER

REVEREND LEWIS RICHARDS WAS ELECTED PASTOR OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF Baltimore in 1784 and remained in that capacity until his retirement in 1818. He recorded in a small brown ledger all the marriages at which he officiated during those years. The record book evidently remained in the possession of the church after his death, and in 1835 Reverend Stephen P. Hill, upon becoming pastor of the church, started to record the marriages which he performed in the same ledger. In 1850 Reverend Hill removed to Washington, D. C., taking the record book with him and continuing to enter records until 1869.

After a lapse of almost a century. Reverend Richards' marriage record book has been returned to Baltimore and now rests among the manuscript collections of the Maryland Historical Society (MS 690). The following marriages represent only a small portion of these records. It is hoped that some interested person will volunteer to transcribe the balance so that they may be more readily available to researchers.

My sister was told when the courthouse in Licking Co., OH burned the employees of the courthouse stood at the windows as long as possible throwing out the land deed books so most of them were saved. Nearly all of the wills, marriage records, etc. were lost. People were asked to come to the courthouse and give information to replace these lost records but certainly many people had already moved on. Some of this probate info. may no longer exist. These are from indexes.

Becky,

I am interested in the Battee family you have posted on WorldConnect site, especially Mary M. Battee. Do you know if her full name is Mary Malissa Battee?

I have a Malissa M. Battee married to Franklin Allen in Licking County 24 Jan 1886.

Frank is a brother to my gggrandmother, Clarissa Allen.

The 1900 Census lists Frank and Malissa in Pataskala, Ohio. Her birth date is given as Apr 1844. On Frank's death certificate (1919), his wife is listed as Mary Allen. I think this is Mary Malissa. Do you know any more about her? Elisha Battee is the only Battee family in Licking County for 1860, 1870, and 1880, so I think she must belong to your Elisha and Jemima. I found Elisha in the Grantee-Grantor Index as buying land in Licking Co. in 1835-36. Do you know where he was in 1840 and 1850? I couldn't find him in Alexandria in 1840, or 1850, on the Census. I look forward to hearing from you.

John Summerfield Battee was born on January 24, 1824 in Baltimore, Maryland. Both he and his brother Richard entered the preparatory school in 1837 and a year later, both entered Dickinson as members of the class of 1842. Their father, Richard Battee, Esq., was a trustee of the College. John joined the Union Philosophical Society (as did his brother) and received his bachelor of arts degree in 1842. He returned to Maryland and received his medical degree from the University of Maryland in 1845; the following year, he studied medicine in Paris. Returning to the United States, he became a physicial in Baltimore. Battee served as a surgeon in the U.S. Army during the Mexican War from 1847 until 1849. After the war, he returned to his practice in Baltimore until the outbreak of the Civil War. He again became a surgeon, but this time with the Navy. Battee died in a Portsmouth, Virginia naval hospital on November 13, 1865.

Was also known as Harry Hall. After the death of his first wife, he married Rachel Harwood, according to license issued in Anne Arundel County on June 23, 1787. She was born February 19, 1764, daughter of Captain Thomas Harwood, of St. James Parish, and Rachel Sprigg his wife. Richard Harwood Sr., who died in Anne Arundel County in 1793, provided for his "niece Rachel Hall the wife of Henry Hall."

On May 16, 1775, as the son and heir of Henry Hall, deceased, he and his mother, Elizabeth Hall, conveyed for 5 shillings "Burrage," "Burrage's Blossom," and "Burrage's End" to John Battee. Margery Hall, wife, waived all dower rights before Richard Harwood Jr. and T. Watkins Jr., two Justices of the Peace for Anne Arundel County.

Hi Becky,

I recently learned how to use our computer for genealogy search and I ran across you and Janet. I was overwhelmed with all the info I found. I will be glad to pass on what I have on Elisha Battee and his family of 9. Elisha's eldest son came to CA in 1853 and my husband is decended from one of his sons. I am looking for Elisha's parents in MD - he was born in 1799. This is a new passion of mine and I am really enjoying it. I wish I had started years ago but when I was working and a family there wasn't the time even if I had a computer then. I am not far from 74 but I don't feel like it. I would love to hear from you.

Supervisor of '70 Buried by Garden City Odd Fellows

Little known to many San Joseans of the present-day but a prominent figure in county circles and the community life of half a century ago and a man beloved by those early pioneers--many now passed away--who were his business (partners and friends.) John M. Battee was laid to rest at Oak Hill yesterday. One of the oldest members of Garden City Lodge, I.O.O.F. which had charge of the funeral. Mr. Battee died October 30, at the age of 93 years after a life of usefulness and energy, which left its mark in many ways upon the Santa Clara valley, running well over the allotted three score years and ten.

Passages from H. S. Foote's book edited in 1888, "Pen Pictures From the Garden of the World," and carefully penned reports--now slightly faded by age--of the county supervisors' meetings of 1870 and later, record events of that period in which Mr. Battee figured.

Supervisor 1870 to '78

He took office as a county supervisor on March 7, 1870, and continued as a member and chairman of the board until March 4, 1878. This was a period when San Jose was growing steadily and beginning to assume proportions other than a town, other than the center of an agricultural district.

It was on June 2, 1874, that James Lick executed his first trust deed whereby his estate was given to charitable and educational work, among the provisions of that document being those giving $25,000 for the purpose of establishing an orphan asylum here and appropriating $700,000 for establishing an observatory on land belonging to him near Lake Tahoe, Placer county. Gratitude for the former gift, in resolutions prepared by Judge Bleden, was so deeply acknowledged that Mr. Lick changed the location for the observatory and in August 1875, with Hon. B. D. Murphy, then mayor of San Jose, visited Mount Hamilton. The board of supervisors was then addressed, the offer to locate the observatory being made if the county would construct a road to the summit.

Chairman Road Committee

In the aforementioned book, the work of Mr. Battee in promoting this road is taken up in a chapter devoted to roads and highways:

"January 9, 1877, the Lick board of trustees and supervisors made an official inspection* * * observed as a general holiday throughout the county. Probably the most earnest and untiring friend of the road was Supervisor J. M. Battee, chairman of the road committee. To his devotion to the cause is due, more than to any other man, the successful termination of the great work that has attracted the attention of the scientific world to the summit of Mount Hamilton."

To the few pioneers remaining who knew Mr. Battee, he is remembered as a man who was modest, plain in appearance and speech, determined, honest in all his dealings and one of the most far-sighted and efficient county officials of the closing quarter of the past century.

Many obstacles faced the supervisors in building the road. Mr. Battee stood staunchly through them all. The valuation of the county then was about 40 millions. To build a road costing approximately $135,000 was considered quite a bite from the tax levy. Under Battee's guidance, the road was built without a bond issue, excepting for a small portion totaling about $12,000 at the mountain end.

For years, the Battees resided at their home on Sunol street. In recent years Mr. Battee lived with a son at Los Gatos. He is survived by two daughters, three sons and a brother: Mrs. Terry McKean, 80 Ashbury street; Mrs. L. E. Wood, Naglee Park; Albert J. Battee of Berkeley; Fred Battee, of Los Gatos; Phillip S. Battee of Lodi, and Samuel Battee of Portland. Mr. Battee was a native of Maryland.

Letter from John M. Battee to his parents,

December 10th, 1854 Before the advent of the telegraph or telephone, letters were the only form of communication between friends and family in different parts of the country. Mail delivery between California and the rest of the United States was slow. But even if a letter was filled with "old news", everyone looked forward to the arrival of word from loved ones.

My sister was told when the courthouse in Licking Co., OH burned the employees of the courthouse stood at the windows as long as possible throwing out the land deed books so most of them were saved. Nearly all of the wills, marriage records, etc. were lost. People were asked to come to the courthouse and give information to replace these lost records but certainly many people had already moved on. Some of this probate info. may no longer exist. I can't remember if I ever responded to this e-mail message! If not, I apologize for taking so long. We were hit by lightening about a week ago, unfortunately via the phone line that we use for the internet, and the modems in both my husband's and my computer were trashed! I bought a replacement modem for my computer, but had to go out of town for 5 days, so I am just now back up and running!

Anyway, thank you for the information on the Battee family. I'll let you know what we are able to find out about the Battees that married into our family. And we'll certainly be trying to learn more about the Stansbury family, since Ruth Stansbury was a direct ancestor. It's kinda hard for me to do much research from here in Florida, other than on the web, but my sister still lives in the Baltimore area, so she plans to find out what she can on the family in the library and Maryland Archives. I'll keep you advised!

Best regards,

Janet

THE HISTORY OF UNION COUNTY OHIO,
CHICAGO: W. H. BEERS & CO. 1883.
ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOURTH OHIO INFANTRY.

Under the President's call of July, 1864, for troops to serve for one year, two full companies were recruited in Union County. Leaving Marysville for Camp Chase on the 31st of August, they were assigned as Companies B and C, of the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Ohio Infantry.

The original commissioned officers of Company B were U. D. Cole, Captain; Peter Hill, First Lieutenant, and George Harriman, Second Lieutenant. During its term of service, this company lost five killed in battle, six wounded, and twelve died in hospitals.

Company C was mustered in under the following commissioned officers: William H. Robb, Captain; W. B. Brown, First Lieutenant, and Joseph Swartz, Second Lieutenant.

Capt. Robb was discharged on account of I wounds received at Murfreesboro, and Lieut. Brown was then promoted Captain, and was in command of the company until wounded at Kingston, March 10, 1865, after which the command devolved on Lieut. T. B. Myers Company C lost eight of its members on the field and in the hospitals, and fourteen wounded. Union County was represented among the field and staff officers of this regiment by A. J. Sterling, who served as Lieutenant Colonel from the organization of the regiment until its muster out.

The One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Ohio was organized September 21, 1864, under Col. John S. Jones, and, on the 23d, left Ohio for Nashville, Tenn., to report to Maj. Gen. W. T. Sherman, then commanding the Military Division of the Mississippi. On arrival Nashville, orders were received to proceed to Murfreesboro, which was then threatened by Forrest's rebel cavalry.

The regiment remained at Murfreesboro until October 27, when it moved to Decatur, Ala. and assisted in defending that garrison from an attack made by Hood's advance. After a movement to the mouth of Elk Creek and back again, the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth remained at Decatur, until recalled to Murfreesboro to participate in the investment of that stronghold. It took an active and prominent part in the battle at Overalls's Creek, losing two officers wounded, six men killed, and thirty-eight wounded.

After this engagement the regiment was ordered on dress-parade and complimented in person by Gen. Rousseau for their gallantry. In the battle of the Cedars, it again distinguished itself by making a charge on the enemy's breastworks and capturing two cannons a stand of rebel colors, belonging to the First and Fourth Florida, and about two hundred prisoners. The regiment lost in this engagement one commissioned officer killed and seven wounded - four men killed and twenty-two wounded. It was complimented in general orders for its conduct on this occasion.

After having participated in all the fighting around Murfreesboro, the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth joined the Twenty-third Army Corps at Columbia, Tenn., and was assigned to the First Brigade, First Division of that corps. In January, 1866, it moved to Washington City, where it remained in camp until February 21, then proceeded to North Carolina, and joining the forces under Gen. Cox, took a conspicuous part in the battle of Five Forks, a Kingston.

On the 10th of March it successfully resisted a fierce attack made by Gen. Hoke. It, lost two officers wounded, four men killed and twenty-three wounded.

This was the last battle in which the regiment was engaged. It joined Sherman's forces at Goldsboro, and served under Gen. Schofield at Wadesboro, N. C., until mustered out at Charlotte, June 28, then returning to Columbus, Ohio, it was paid off, and discharged July 7, 1865.

Thanks so much for sharing this! My info from the 1982 Licking County Genealogical Society family histories, pages 322-323, has him being the son of William Henry Mead II, who founded a bank in Pataskala in 1888, and Isabelle "Belle" Youmans. Chapter VIII - Border Families, Houses & Names

Rutherford

According to legend, the first of the Rutherfords was a peasant who guided the Scottish King Ruther across the Tweed just behind the present Rutherford Lodge, where their Chief still lives, and was given the adjoining land for this valuable service. It seems a pity to spoil a good story, but Scottish History knows of no "King Ruther". The ford, however, is genuine enough, and the peasant could well have taken Malcolm Canmore's great-grandfather across it on his way to Carham, the victory that gave Scotland her present size and shape. It would have cost Malcolm II nothing to give him the land as his well-earned reward, especially as it still belonged to Ethelred the Redeless (or Unready) and the name itself could simply mean "cattle ford" or the somewhat redundant "river ford" (one does not normally ford anything else!). If so the Rutherfords are the second oldest landed family in the Borders after the Swintons, and like them of Anglo-Saxon origin.

However, the first actually known to History is Robert de Rodysforde, who witnessed a charter of St. David I in 1140, and the record is only continuous (to the extent of something being down on parchment or paper for every generation of the family) from the time of Hugo de Rutherford, again mentioned as a witness to a land grant about 1215. His grandson, Sir Nichol de Rutherford, signed the Ragman Roll like nearly all Scottish lairds except Wallace himself, but later joined Wallace, to whose wife he was related, and assisted him in the Battle of Biggar and the capture of Sanquhar Castle. Sir Robert de Rutherford, his son, was a friend of Robert the Bruce and of the "Good Sir James Douglas", and fell with Sir James in Spain, guarding the Bruce's heart (which was later brought back to Melrose Abbey, where it remains hidden).

Sir Robert's grandson, Sir Richard Rutherford, was an ambassador to the English Court in 1398 and Warden of the Marches (together with his sons) two years later. Another of the same generation was Robert Rutherford of Chatto, also known as "Robin of the Tod's Tail" from his unconventional battle standard at Otterburn in 1388. He had conveniently killed a fox just before the battle and finding nothing more suitable to use as a rallying point for his men, he tied its brush to a lance. It was distinctive enough, and it worked: he survived and found himself on the winning side.

Philip Rutherford, near the end of the 15th century, was the first Rutherford heir in 300 years, and perhaps longer, to die before his father; his eldest son Richard was the first head of the family to die without issue, and the present head of the family is descended from Philip's younger brother Thomas.

The Rutherfords of Hunthill are descended from John Rutherford of Chatto, a younger son of Sir Richard. One of his sixth-generation descendants was Andrew, later Lord Rutherford and Earl of Teviot, who served in the French army in the first decades of Louis XIV's long reign. He came to England with Charles II, who gave him a peerage, and brought with him his regiment, who became the 1st Royal Scots. Subsequently he was made Earl of Teviot as a reward for helping to negotiate the sale of Dunkirk (taken by Cromwell a few years earlier) to Louis: this gave Charles II a useful lump sum for which he did not have to answer to Parliament. Lord Teviot was appointed Governor of Tangier (which had become an English possession as part of Catherine of Braganza's dowry) but was killed there by the Moors in a skirmish. Tangier was later abandoned as too expensive to defend and supply—a grave strategic error as it could have been used to keep the Barbary pirates bottled up in the Mediterranean and, together with Gibraltar (seized from Spain 20 years after Tangier was given up to the Moors), it would have given England complete control of the Straits.

The Hunthill branch of the family also included Major Andrew Rutherford, who fought with Claverhouse at Killiecrankie and later emigrated to France like many adherents of James VII and II (and the King himself). With the Scottish company he commanded, he served with distinction in the French army, notably at the capture of Rosas on the Costa Brava and in the defence of Alsace (conquered a few years earlier by Louis XIV and Turenne) against a German counter-attack. Major Rutherford and his men, wading breast-deep through the icy Rhine in December, recaptured a small island to which the Germans had already built a pontoon bridge, then held it against heavy odds until reinforcements arrived. Major Rutherford is not recorded as having been killed in the battle but probably died from wounds suffered there, as nothing more is heard of him.

An earlier Rutherford of Hunthill was the "Cock of Hunthill", also an ancestor of William Gladstone, who played a prominent part in the action at Redeswire, the last "official" battle between Scots and English, though there were several later affrays and raids. Nine of his sons also fought there, among them Richard, the "bauld Rutherford" who led the Jedburgh men as their Provost and who had a few years earlier presided over the "debagging" incident mentioned on p. 23.

Several Rutherfords of the Hundalee branch (descended from yet another son of Sir Richard) were provosts of Aberdeen. One of them, Alexander, held this office for nearly 20 years and was a noted Anglophobe. He made a speech against the Union of Crowns, first in Scots, which the English nobles could not understand, then in French, then in Latin, but avoiding speaking any English, except a few words whenever he ran out of Latin. This made a great impression on the scholarly King James, who disagreed with him but gave him a ring from his own finger as a token of appreciation. Provost Alexander Rutherford also had to put down a "sit-in" by the boys of Aberdeen Grammar School, who were armed with "hagbuttis, pistollis, swordis and lang wapynniss", organised as a protest against the suppression of Christmas celebrations by the Kirk.

An interesting document from the family history of the Rutherfords is their "peace treaty" with the Kerrs at Ancrum Spittal in 1560. Written in medieval Scots and difficult to read, it provides compensation of £500 to be paid by the Kerrs to George Rutherford of Longnewton, whose father had been killed not long before, and for Robert Kerr of Newhall to "offer his sword" to George Rutherford (and presumably get it back) "according to the practice and fashion of the country". Additionally several Kerr-Rutherford marriages were to be arranged, in some cases between unspecified young couples, when the girls were 12 and the boys reached an unspecified age of majority (probably 14 or 15). In one case the parties were named; Andrew Kerr (Robert's son) and a daughter of Philip Rutherford of Edgerston. If Andrew died, his next available brother was to take his place; if the girl died, "another gentlewoman of that surname and blood". Some of the signatories were illiterate, so the notary "led their pens".

Not all the Rutherfords were soldiers, landowners or provosts: one of them was a naval captain at Trafalgar and several were professors of theology, medicine or science, among them Samuel Rutherford, D.D., one of the leading Covenanters', Dr. John Rutherford, and his son Daniel. Sir Walter Scott's uncle, who discovered nitrogen gas. As a young man in Paris, Dr. Daniel Rutherford refused to attend a party where Prince Charles Edward, by then an alcoholic and an overweight shadow of his former self, was expected to be present; though not a Jacobite, he had too much respect for the House of Stewart to witness the degradation into which they had sunk. He died suddenly, while stroking a cat, after attending his sister, Sir Walter Scott's mother, who had gone down with "paralysis"; another sister died two days later and Mrs. Scott not long after.

If we now live in the nuclear age, for better or for worse, part of the responsibility must lie with Lord Rutherford of Nelson (1871-1937), the father of atomic science. He was born Ernest Rutherford, near the town of Nelson in New Zealand, from which he took his title, his grandfather having emigrated from Perth thirty years earlier, and educated at Nelson College and at Canterbury College, Christchurch, where he graduated with first-class honours in mathematics and physics. He then came to Trinity College, Cambridge, and worked under Sir J.J. Thomson (also of Scottish descent, though born in England), experimenting with electromagnetic waves and with various kinds of radiation. He was appointed Professor of Physics at McGill University in Montreal before his 27th birthday, returned to New Zealand to be married and settled with his wife in Montreal, continuing his research into radio-activity there and at Manchester University, where he became Professor of Physics in 1907. While at Manchester he discovered the division of the atom into a nucleus and electrons but did not manage to actually split the atom, though he foresaw that it could be done and would give rise to an entirely new and terrifying form of energy. He succeeded Thomson as Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge in 1919 (having been knighted a few years earlier), was elected President of the Royal Society in 1925 and was created a peer in 1931.

Clan Rutherford

Robert De Rutherford witnessed a charter by David 1 around 1140. Sir Nichol de Rutherford is mentioned in several charters between 1161 and 1272. Sir Richard Rutherford was a favourite of Robert III he was ambassador to England in 1398.

Thomas Rutherford, The black Laird of Edgerston, was famed for his daring attacks upon the English. His most notable exploit was at the battle of the Red Swire at Caterfield in July 1575. This came about when the English and the Scots wardens of the marched had met to hear mutual grievances and to give redress for complaints. The Scots demanded the surrender of a notorious English brigand named Farnstein. The English claimed that Farnstein had fled and could not be found. Sir John Carmichael, the Scots warden, doubted this and said so to Sir John in plain terms. The English warden retorted with insults regarding Carmichael's family whereupon the English Bowman discharged a flight of arrows among the Scots Sir John Carmichael was taken prisoner However the Rutherfords and the men of Jedburgh soon appeared and put the English to flight, freeing Carmichael and instead taking prisoner the English warden and a number of lieutenants.

The Lairds of Edgerston further distinguished themselves fighting for Charles I during the civil war Rutherford raised a troop of horse at his own expense and fought in England until the king surrendered in 1646.

He took up the cause again only to be severely wounded and have his whole troop wiped out at the battle of Dunbar in 1650.

General Andrew Rutherford was raised to peerage as Lord Rutherford in 1661. He was appointed Governor of Tangier in Morocco in 1663 and was killed in battle against the native forces in 1664. He had been advanced to the earldom of Teviot, but died without issue, this title became extinct, the title Lord Rutherford passing to a cousin. This title is also extinct.

Andrew Rutherford was a MP for Leith from 1839-1851. He held the office of Lord Advocate and was raised to the bench with the judicial title of Lord Rutherford. Earnest Rutherford discovered the alpha particle and developed the nuclear theory of atomic structure, laying the groundwork for the development of nuclear physics in the 20th century. He was knighted in 1914 and appointed to the Order of Merit in 1925 and died in 1937.

The lands of Rutherford in Roxburghshire near Maxton The first is that a man named Ruther guided an ancient king of Scots (Rhyderch Hael?) over a little known ford in the river Tweed, giving him a victory over the Northumbrians. He was given a grant of land there after, named after the crossing. Another story tells of an English army which foolishly abandoned a strong position on heights above the River Tweed to attack a Scottish force on the opposite bank The English attempted to force a crossing of the river and were defeated. The Scots named the place Rue the Ford, To commemorate the disaster at that spot

Notes for JOSEPH JAMES REDMOND:
I got some papers on their family history. His grandma's family all grew up in Lone Tree, IA and mostly died there and his grandpa's family grew up in Muscatine, IA and mostly died there. His great great great grandpa's family came over from Germany and his great great grandma's family came over from Baden, Germany. Joe's great grandpa opened the Hawkeye Pearl Button Company in Muscatine which was quite a big company. Joe's uncle lives on family property that was passed down from the great grandpa and we found the shells used to make the buttons in the corn fields. That's where they would dump the shells when done. It was all very interesting. When I was at Joe's Uncle's they had alot of old books on Muscatine and info on the button companies. I read up on a great deal of them. Joe's great grandpa is mentioned in a book called Little Stories about Muscatine. And Joe's grandma got a book about Lone Tree and she said if she has an extra copy of it, she will send it to us. It has a pix of her dad and uncle as volunteer firemen there

Jehle born 3/23/1815 in Baden and died 1/23/1886 buried at St. Mary's Cemetary in Nichols, Iowa near Lone Tree and Muscatine. Father was Michael Jehle born 10/15/1807 in Baden and died 8/20/1887 buried same as mother. Children were Conrad, Athanas, Frank, and daughter who died young VLR 516: The Hagermann's came from somewhere in Germany but I don't know where or when.

Mary was born in Baden 12/28/1848, Mary's mother was Hillary Rockweiler born 1822 in Baden and died 9/21/1912 in Cazenovia, Wisconsin. Father was Franziska Havner Rockweiler born 12/18/1829 in Baden and died 1/15/1890's in Cazenovia.
