From EE Bylander

"When I was about 5 years old, he dressed up in one of Grandmother's old dresses, tied a sunbonnet on his head, and came bounding out of the side porch screeching at the top of his voice. The group of boy and girl cousins playing on the front porch scattered in all directions-- I hid behind a bush and wouldn't come out until he went into the house."

"In Cole Camp (and probably other German or Swiss communities) when a couple had become engaged to marry, someone was selected to be their ribbon man. He draped ribbons all around his hat and it was his duty to announce the couple's wedding plans to the groups of people who he either met on the street or called out of their homes to make the announcement. Uncle Albert Schwald was the ribbon man for many couples in Cole Camp, and all couples at that time had one. Ribbon man, that is."
