Notes for Captain, Sir Francis Drake:

Francis Drake was born in Tavistock, Devon, the son of Mary Mylwaye and her husband Edmund Drake (1518–1585), a Protestant farmer who later became a preacher, grandson of John Drake and Margret Cole. He is often confused with his nephew Francis Drake (1573–1634), the son of Richard Drake and Ursula Stafford, grandson of John Drake (1500–1558) – Edmund's older brother – and Amy Grenville (1510–1577), and great-grandson of John Drake and Margaret Cole (cf. John White, note 2). His maternal grandfather was Richard Mylwaye.

Drake was reportedly named after his godfather Francis Russell, 2nd Earl of Bedford, and throughout his cousins' lineages are direct connections to the Royalty and famous people such as Sir Richard Grenville, through Amy Grenville, and Geoffrey Chaucer, through Ursula Stafford. Ursula's line may be traced to royalty within four generations. This said, James Froude states that "He told Camden that he was of mean extraction. He meant merely that he was proud of his parents and made no idle pretensions to noble birth. His father was a tenant of the Earl of Bedford, and must have stood well with him, for Francis Russell, the heir of the earldom, was the boy's godfather."

John Drake and Margaret Cole were also great-grandparents of Sir Walter Raleigh.

As with many of Drake's contemporaries, the exact date of his birth is unknown and could be as early as 1535, the 1540 date being extrapolated from two portraits: one a miniature painted by Nicholas Hilliard in 1581 when he was allegedly 42, the other painted in 1594 when he was alleged to be 53 according to the 1921/22 edition of the Dictionary of National Biography, which quotes Barrow's Life of Drake (1843) p. 5. Francis was the second eldest of 12 children; as he was not granted legal right to his father's farm, he had to find his own career.

During the Roman Catholic uprising of 1549, the family was forced to flee to Kent. At about the age of 13 Francis took to the sea on a cargo barque, becoming master of the ship at the age of 20. He spent his early career honing his sailing skills on the difficult waters of the North Sea, and after the death of the captain for whom he was sailing he became master of his own barque. At age 23, Drake made his first voyage to the New World under the sails of the Hawkins family of Plymouth, in company with his cousin, Sir John Hawkins. Together, Hawkins and Drake made the first English slave-trading expeditions.

Conflict in the Caribbean

Around 1563 Drake first sailed west to the Spanish Main, on a ship owned by his brother John Hawkins, with a cargo of slaves from Africa. He took an immediate dislike to the Spanish, at least in part due to their mistrust of non-Spaniards and their Catholicism. His hostility is said to have been increased by an incident at San Juan de Ulua in 1568, when, while delivering his load of slaves, a Spanish fleet came upon him by surprise. Although he was in his enemy's port, it was conventional for the Spanish to 'surrender' for a few hours in order to purchase slaves. Thus it was unusual for a fleet of enemy warships to appear out of the blue. Drake survived the attack in large part because of his ability to swim. From then on, he devoted his life to working against the Spanish Empire; the Spanish considered him an outlaw pirate (see also Piracy in the Caribbean), but to England he was simply a sailor and privateer. On his second such voyage, he fought a battle against Spanish forces that cost many English lives but earned him the favour of Queen Elizabeth.

The most celebrated of Drake's Caribbean adventures was his capture of the Spanish Silver Train at Nombre de Dios in March 1573. With a crew including many French privateers and Maroons — African slaves who had escaped the Spanish — Drake raided the waters around Darien (in modern Panama) and tracked the Silver Train to the nearby port of Nombre de Dios. He made off with a fortune in gold, but had to leave behind another fortune in silver, because it was too heavy to carry back to England. It was during this expedition that he climbed a high tree in the central mountains of the Isthmus of Panama and thus became the first Englishman to see the Pacific Ocean.

When Drake returned to Plymouth on August 9, 1573, a mere 30 Englishmen returned with him, every one of them rich for life. However, Queen Elizabeth, who had up to this point sponsored and encouraged Drake's raids, signed a temporary truce with King Philip II of Spain, and so was unable to officially acknowledge Drake's accomplishment.

Notes for Lady Elizabeth Sydenham:

Miss Elizabeth Sydenham had a secure future long before she married Sir Francis Drake. She was the heiress of a battery of family properties: the house of Combe Sydenham, the manors of Sutton Bingham and Bossington, Tracts of land in Bossington, Selworthy, Lucombe, Porlock, Sutton Bingham, Coker, Wester Colcombe, and Monksilver, all varying in size and tenure, some held from the Crown and others from the Dean and Capter of Bath and Wells.

Sir Francis had planned to bequeath the bulk of his fortune to his brother Thomas so that it would have stayed in the Drake family. But the marriage settlement bound Buckland Abbey (the Drake home) and the manors of Sampford Spiney, Sherford and Yarcombe to the Lady Elizabeth upon the death of Drake. Drake wished to provide his nephew Francis Drake with something as well. After Drake's death Elizabeth married Sir William Courtenay of Powderham.

66. Duke of Marlborough John¹¹ Churchill (Elizabeth¹⁰ Drake, John⁹, John⁸, Bernard⁷, John⁶, John⁵, John⁴, John³, John², John¹) was born 24 Jun 1650 in Marlborough, Wiltshire, England, and died 16 Jun 1722 in Windsor, Berkshire, England. He married (1) Duchess of Marlborough Sarah Jennings. She was born 1660 in Holywell, St Albans, Hertfordshire, England, and died 18 Oct 1744 in London, Middlesex, England. He married (2) Barbara Villiers 1670, daughter of William Villiers and Mary Bayning. She was born 1641 in St Margaret Westminster, London, Middlesex, England, and died 09 Oct 1709 in Chiswick, Hounslow, Middlesex, England.

Notes for Duke of Marlborough John Churchill:

John Churchill was born to Elizabeth and Sir Winston Churchill (the famous Prime Minister, Sir Winston Churchill was a descendant) in the immediate aftermath of the English Civil War. He was educated at St Paul's School, London. Apparently he learned the basics of military strategy from a book in the School library. His father had fought for the Royalists during the Civil War and had suffered badly for it—they lived in very modest circumstances until the end of the Commonwealth. His staunch support for Charles II of England paid off with The Restoration, however, and one of the fruits of this was the appointment of 17-year-old John Churchill to the household of the man second in line to the throne, James, the Duke of York and Lord High Admiral. (Rumour, then and later, also had it that Churchill's appointment was aided by the liaison of his sister Arabella and the Duke.) Remaining at court for a while, he then saw turns of duty first in the Mediterranean at Tangier and then at the blockade of Algiers, and in 1672 participated in the last of the Anglo-Dutch Wars. In the latter, he became a Marine officer. Marlborough's conduct as an ensign in a Company of Guards that served as Marines to augment the Marines of the Admiral's Regiment during the Naval battle of Sole Bay in 1672 so impressed James, that he commissioned him a Captain in the Admiral's Regiment after four Marine Captains died during the battle. Marlborough later led a Battalion of the Admiral's Regiment in the land battle of Enzheim in 1674. He was attached to the siege of Maastricht, his first taste of land battle. Having come to the attention of the French crown during this action, he moved on to the fighting in Alsace, where he fought with one of the leading generals of the day, Marshal Turenne.

Marriage and early career

That war ended in 1674, and Churchill settled down to peaceful life. On October 1, 1678, he married Sarah Jennings, who would come to fiercely represent his interests at court while he was off fighting on the Continent.

In 1682, then-Colonel Churchill entered the Scots Peerage as Lord Churchill, of Eyemouth in the County of Berwick. In the years to follow he engaged in various diplomatic missions to Spain and their former enemy, the Dutch Republic, largely in opposition to French interests.

In 1685, Charles II died without legitimate issue, and Churchill's former employer, the Duke of York, became James II of England. Shortly thereafter James elevated him to the English Peerage as Baron Churchill, of Sandridge in the County of Hertford.

Notes for Duchess of Marlborough Sarah Jennings:

Sarah Jennings was born in Holywell, Hertfordshire, England in 1660, the daughter of Richard Jennings and Frances Thornhurst. Sarah's friendship with Anne came about some time after 1673, when she and her sister Frances joined the household of the Duke of York (later to be King James II) and befriended his younger daughter; Anne was a few years Sarah's junior. They called one another by pet names, Sarah being "Mrs Freeman" and Anne "Mrs Morley".

On October 1, 1678, Sarah married John Churchill, later to be created Duke of Marlborough, and they made a glittering couple. Marlborough, though he had supported James, also had a role in bringing William of Orange to the British throne. For his support of William, and in recognition of his skills as a military leader, Marlborough was rewarded with his earldom. Sarah basked in his reflected glory, but had political skills of her own as well.

Following Anne's accession to the throne, Sarah was made Mistress of the Robes, Keeper of the Privy Purse and Ranger of Windsor Great Park (Berkshire) where she and her husband resided in what was to become known as Cumberland Lodge. She exercised great personal and political influence. However, with the introduction into Anne's household of a politically aware rival, Sarah's own cousin, Abigail Masham, the relationship between the queen and her old friend deteriorated greatly. In 1711, both Sarah and her husband fell out of royal favour. Anne's death in 1714 restored their fortunes, but the Duke died in 1722 and never saw the completion of Blenheim Palace, the house built for him by a grateful nation. It was left to Sarah to oversee the remaining work, and she was often in conflict with the architect, Sir John Vanbrugh.

Close links with the Royal Family remained. Sarah sought to marry off her granddaughter Lady Diana Spencer (1710-1735), to Frederick, Prince of Wales. The Duchess remained friendly with the prince and his family, however, even after this plan had failed.

Notes for Barbara Villiers:

She was born Barbara Villiers, the only child of William Villiers, 2nd Viscount Grandison (making her a cousin of George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham), and the heiress Mary Bayning. In autumn 1643 Lord Grandison died from a wound sustained in battle, leaving his widow and daughter in straitened circumstances.

[edit]

Life as a courtesan to royalty

Villiers was considered at the time to be one of the most beautiful Royalist women, but her lack of fortune left her with reduced marriage prospects. Her first serious romance was with Philip Stanhope, 2nd Earl of Chesterfield, but he was on the lookout for a rich wife. On 14 April 1659 she married Roger Palmer against his family's wishes; his father predicted that she would make him one of the most miserable men in the world. The two separated, but did not divorce, in 1662, following the birth of her first son. The two remained married for his lifetime, but it is believed that Palmer did not father any of his wife's children. [2]

She became King Charles's mistress in 1660, while still married to Palmer, and whilst Charles was still in exile. As a reward for her services, the King created her husband Baron Limerick and Earl of Castlemaine in 1661. Of her six children, five were acknowledged by Charles as his:

Lady Anne Palmer, later FitzRoy (1661-1722), probably daughter of Charles II, although some people believed she bore a resemblance to the Earl of Chesterfield. She later became the Countess of Sussex Charles Palmer, later FitzRoy (1662-1730), styled Lord Limerick and later Earl of Southampton, created Duke of Southampton (1675), later 2nd Duke of Cleveland (1709)

Henry FitzRoy (1663-1690), created Earl of Euston (1672) and Duke of Grafton (1709)
Charlotte FitzRoy (1664-1718), later Countess of Lichfield
George FitzRoy (1665-1716), created Earl of Northumberland (1674) and Duke of Northumberland (1683)
Barbara (Benedicta) FitzRoy (1672-1737) - She was acknowledged as Charles' daughter, but was probably the child of her mothers second cousin and lover, John Churchill, later Duke of Marlborough

Notes for 5th Earl Spencer John Poyntz Spencer:

John Poyntz Spencer, 5th Earl Spencer, KG (27 October 1835 – 13 August 1910) (known as the Red Earl because of his distinctive long red beard) was a British Liberal Party politician under and close friend of British prime minister William Ewart Gladstone. He was the son of Frederick Spencer, 4th Earl Spencer and was educated at Harrow .

He succeeded to the Earldom of Spencer in 1857. He served in a number of governmental posts; he served as Lord President of the Council and as First Lord of the Admiralty. Most famously, he served twice as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, when in 1882 Lord Frederick Cavendish and T.H. Burke, the Chief Secretary for Ireland and the Under-Secretary for Ireland, were assassinated in what came to be known as the Phoenix Park Murders. Outside politics, he was the man who introduced barbed wire to Britain.

During Lord Spencer's tenure as Lord Lieutenant in Ireland, his staff was staffed with several homosexuals, which led one nationalist MP to famously nickname the Lord Lieutenant's Dublin Castle administration Sodom and Begorrah.

On 8 July 1858, he married Charlotte Seymour (a granddaughter of Lord Hugh Seymour), but the union did not produce any heirs and on his death, was succeeded by his half-brother, Charles.

803. Sir Winston Leonard Spenc Winston Leonard¹⁸ Churchill (Randolph Henry¹⁷, John Winston¹⁶, George Spencer¹⁵, George¹⁴ Spencer, Charles¹³, Anne¹² Churchill, John¹¹, Elizabeth¹⁰ Drake, John⁹, John⁸, Bernard⁷, John⁶, John⁵, John⁴, John³, John², John¹) was born 30 Nov 1874 in Blenheim Palace, Woodstock, Oxfordshire, England, and died 24 Jan 1965 in Hyde Park Gate, Kensington, London, England. He married Clementine Ogilvy Hozier 12 Sep 1908 in St Margarets, Westminster, London, England, daughter of Henry Hozier and Henrietta Ogilvy. She was born 1885 in Blenheim Palace, Oxfordshire, England, and died 12 Dec 1977 in Princess Gate, Hyde Park, London, England.

Notes for Sir Winston Leonard Spenc Winston Leonard Churchill:

Churchill's legal surname was Spencer-Churchill (he was related to the Spencer family), but starting with his father, Lord Randolph Churchill, his branch of the family used the name Churchill in their public life.

Winston Churchill was a descendant of the first famous member of the Churchill family, John Churchill, 1st Duke of Marlborough. Winston's politician father, Lord Randolph Churchill, was the third son of the 7th Duke of Marlborough; Winston's mother was Lady Randolph Churchill (née Jennie Jerome), daughter of American millionaire Leonard Jerome.

Winston Churchill was born in Blenheim Palace in Woodstock, Oxfordshire; he was delivered unexpectedly when his mother went into labour during a carriage ride. A common myth is that he was born in the ladies room during a ball; this is untrue.

As was typical for upper-class boys at that time, he spent much of his childhood at boarding schools. He sat the entrance exam for Harrow School, but, famously, on confronting the Latin paper, carefully wrote the title, his name, and the number 1 followed by a dot, and could not think of anything else to write. He was accepted despite this, but placed in the bottom division where they were primarily taught English, at which he excelled. Today, this famous ancient public school offers an annual Churchill essay-prize on a subject chosen by the head of the English department.

He was rarely visited by his mother (then known as Lady Randolph), whom he virtually worshipped, despite his letters begging her to either come or let his father permit him to come home. In later years, after Winston reached adulthood, he and his mother became closer, developing a kinship more like a brother and a sister than son and mother, coupled by a strong friendship.

He followed his father's career keenly but had a distant relationship with him. Once, in 1886, he is reported to have proclaimed, "My daddy is Chancellor of the Exchequer and one day that's what I'm going to be." His desolate, lonely childhood stayed with him throughout his life. On the other hand, as a child he was very close to his nanny, Elizabeth Anne Everest. Churchill did badly at Harrow, regularly being punished for poor work and lack of effort. He had an independent, rebellious nature and he failed to achieve much academically, failing some of the same courses numerous times and refusing to study the classics (that is, Latin and Greek). He showed ability in other areas such as history, in which he was sometimes top of his class. The view of Churchill as a failure at school is one which he himself propagated. He did, however, become the school's fencing champion.
