Notes for Francesco Antonio Giuseppe Semeraro:

Francesco was illiterate. On his death record, he is described as a "vaticale", a water bearer. His marriage listing shows him as resident of Ostuni at the time of his marriage.

His surname on his baptism record is shown as "Semerano". On his father's baptism record, the surname is shown as "Zambarano" and on the baptism records of his father's brother's and sisters, the name is shown as "Zamerano". In Cisternino, the name is only ever spelled as "Semeraro", so the range of spellings in Ostuni is intriguing.

33. Cosimo Damiano⁶ Semeraro (Nunzio Oronzo⁵, Francesco Antonio Giuseppe⁴, Giacomo Oronzo Vincenzo³ Semeraro, Francesco Antonio² Zamerano, Nunzio Oronzo¹ Zamarano)^{127,128,129,130,131,132,133,134,135,136,137,138,139,140,141,142,143,144,145,146,147,148} was born 04 Mar 1839 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy, and died Aft. 1865. He married Giuditta Ardente^{149,150,151,152,153,154,155,156,157,158,159,160,161,162,163,164,165,166,167} 17 Apr 1856 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy¹⁶⁸. She was born 09 Nov 1841 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy, and died Aft. 1865.

Notes for Cosimo Damiano Semeraro:

A stonemason by trade, Cosimo was the first in the Semeraro line to abandon farming. It appears that he may have been apprenticed to a stonemason named Girolamo Angiolla. I deduce this for several reasons. First, the traditional way in which Italians at that time named their children was initially after the father's parents, then the mother's parents, then alternating between the eldest of the father's siblings and the eldest of the mother's siblings. Recall that Giuditta was a foundling and therefore of unknown parentage, so the names of her parents and siblings could not have been used. Cosimo and Giuditta followed this pattern for the first female child, who was named Maria Teresa and the second and third male children, who were named Nunzio (child number two died before the third was born). One would expect the fourth child to have been named after Cosimo's eldest brother, Francesco. However, the couple chose the name Girolamo. Girolamo died, but the sixth child was again given the name Girolamo. The couple's break with the traditional pattern of bestowing names shows that they had great respect for someone named Girolamo.

Second, the later Girolamo's birth record refers to Girolamo Angiolla, a 60-year-old stonemason who accompanied Cosimo to the Cisternino municipal offices to report the birth. That this Girolamo was both a stonemason and a generation older than Cosimo may indicate a mentor relationship that would have arisen during an apprenticeship.

Cosimo appears to have been illiterate. Although he signed his own marriage certificate, each of the birth records of his children states that he was illiterate (and therefore could not attest to the truth of his statements by signing the record).

Notes for Giuditta Ardente:

Giuditta was abandoned at birth, probably on the steps of the Church of San Nicola, as was the custom at that time in Italy. Her surname Ardente means "spirited, ardent". Such a name, known as an "augurale", was given to foundlings and illegitimate children, which were quite common in Italy due to the extreme poverty and inheritance by the eldest male of all the family land, and therefore wealth. (For more information on foundlings, illegitimate children and orphans in Italy, see "Italian Genealogical Records", by Trafford R. Cole.) Although Giuditta's marriage banns indicate that the lineage on her maternal side was "recognized" and that a death record for her mother was provided, these may have been formalities required by the Catholic Church to permit her to be married.

Also, the marriage banns refers to her as "Giuditta Ardente Antico." This surname never again appears in the birth records of her children that I examined. It may simply reflect the fact that she was living with someone named Maria Rosa Antico, perhaps having been taken in as a child to act as a servant for the Antico family.

Marriage Notes for Cosimo Semeraro and Giuditta Ardente:

As is evident from the dates, Giuditta was pregnant prior to marriage. In fact Cosimo was only 17 years old, while Giuditta was a mere 14! Although nowadays there is a common misconception to the contrary, these were not average marriage ages at that time.

Giuditta reportedly gave birth to 21 children.

Oronzo Vincenzo³ Semeraro, Francesco Antonio² Zamerano, Nunzio Oronzo¹ Zamarano)^{185,186,187,188,189,190,191,192,193,194} was born 25 Jan 1859 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy, and died 02 Jan 1918 in Barbour County, West Virginia. He married Anna Isabella Molendini^{195,196,197,198,199,200,201,202,203} Feb 1883 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy, daughter of Martino Molendini and Elisabetta Baldasarre. She was born 22 Feb 1863, and died 23 Jan 1937 in Utica, New York.

Notes for Nunzio Semeraro:

Nunzio, together with his wife Anna and their children Giuditta, Teresa, Cosimo and Martino, emigrated to the United States to join his daughter Elisabetta, who had earlier accompanied her husband Vitantonio Zizzi to West Virginia. The family sailed from Napoli on November 15, 1916, on the Re d'Italia, arriving in New York on December 10 that same year. Immigration officials detained the six Semeraros for a day before releasing them for fear that they were "likely to become public charges". Annina (Anna) Agnes Zizzi indicates that this was because Cosimo had respiratory problems.

Nunzio moved the family to West Virginia and labored in several mines in the northwestern part of the state. One tragic day, Nunzio's son Martino fell ill. Nunzio substituted for him in the mines that day but did not return alive, perishing instead when a tunnel collapsed.

Elisabetta Maria⁸ Semeraro (Nunzio⁷, Cosimo Damiano⁶, Nunzio Oronzo⁵, Francesco Antonio Giuseppe⁴, Giacomo Oronzo Vincenzo³ Semeraro, Francesco Antonio² Zamerano, Nunzio Oronzo¹ Zamarano)^{218,219,220,221,222,223,224,225,226,227} was born 14 Aug 1890 in Cisternino, Brindisi, Italy, and died 18 Nov 1979 in Utica, New York. Naturalization: 09 Jun 1943, Utica, New York

Notes for Vitantonio Zizzi:

Vitantonio's godmother was his aunt Maria Concetta Zizzi and his godfather appears to have been his paternal grandfather.

Vitantonio may have traveled from Italy to the United States three times. With several cousins, he may have sailed from Napoli on May 31, 1907 on the Königen Luise, arriving in New York on June 14. Destination: the home of a cousin, Francesco Zizzi, in Corinthe, West Virginia, perhaps to scout out work possibilities. If that Vitantonio Zizzi was indeed he, it is not known when he returned to Italy. Immigration records indicate that he probably re-entered the United States, via New York, on November 25, 1910, this time with his brother Giovanni, on the König Albert, which departed Napoli on November 11. Vitantonio and Giovanni then probably journeyed to Kayford, West Virginia this time, to the home of their cousin Vito Domenico Zizzi.

Again, if that was indeed my grandfather, exactly when he went back to Italy is unknown. Apparently, he traveled all the way back to Cisternino to find a bride. According to his daughter Margherita (Mary) Zizzi, Vitantonio went to the home of Nunzio Semeraro to request the hand of one of his daughters in marriage. Cosimo wanted to marry off Elisabetta, the eldest, but she was not immediately taken with Vitantonio. Only reluctantly did Elisabetta consent to wed Vitantonio. The couple soon found themselves leaving the Bay of Napoli on the Regina d'Italia, on March 17, 1914, arriving New York on April 3, 1914 after port calls in Palermo and Genoa.

In 1986, when my Uncle Cosmo and Aunt Ruff Zizzi and I spent an afternoon at the U.S. Archives in Washington, DC, we found what we concluded were immigration records for Vitantonio Zizzi and his family. I have no doubt about the relevancy of the records for the Semeraros (see information on Nunzio Semeraro and Anna Isabella Molendini) and for the time Vitantonio and his wife Elisabetta entered together. The record from November 1910, for a Vito Zizzi and a Giovanni Zizzi, is also probably relevant, although the age listed for Vito is drastically inaccurate (by around 6 years). This record probably pertains to my grandfather because (1) Vitantonio's brother Giovanni is not listed in later entry records with any other immigrating family members, (2) family tradition has it that the two brothers arrived together but that Vitantonio returned to Italy alone and (3) Giovanni's wife's obituary states that she immigrated to the United States from Italy in November 1910 -- making it likely that she met her future husband en route. The first record that we saved from 1907 is, however, questionable. We decided it related to Vitantonio Zizzi simply because of the name and the destination, and because the 1910 record indicated that he had been in the United States previously. That "Vito Zizzi" may, though, have been a cousin. There were numerous Vitantonio and Vito Zizzis from Cisternino, all about the same age, all related. Why? The practice of naming children resulted in the eldest male grandsons getting their paternal grandfather's name. So in a Vitantonio Zizzi family with six sons (i.e. the family of my great-great-grandfather), THEIR firstborn sons were all named "Vitantonio." That's five "Vitantonio Zizzis" besides my own grandfather. Plus, to confuse matters, "Vito" was considered a different name: hence my grandfather's brother was named "Vito", after his MATERNAL grandfather, Vito Zizzi. The upshot of all this is that I am only confident of the later two immigration records (the Zizzi-Semeraro record and the later Semeraro family record) and reasonably comfortable with the 1910 record.
